CHURCHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Cows enjoy some fresh pasture as warmer temperatures settle in. Rain also pushes lush spring grazing growth. The milking herd of Galen Martin near Churchtown is making the most of a ryegrass/clover mix along with some orchardgrass. Martin milks about 65 cows.

According to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service (PASS), for the week ending April 15, conditions were poor for fieldwork. Soil moisture was rated 49 percent adequate and 51 percent surplus for the state, with spring plowing, planting oats and other crops, fixing fences, applying lime and fertilizer, and other work under way.

PASS reports that pasture growth is very slow, and some farmers are still bringing stored feed to livestock. Thirty-eight percent of the pasture land is rated good to excellent compared to 29 percent the previous week.

The grazing season has begun. And The spring issue of Foraging Around is included this issue. Photo by Stan Hall

Lefever Joins Lancaster Farming

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Dave Lefever recently joined Lancaster Farming as the new dairy staff writer.

Lefever's agricultural experience began on the farm where he grew up in northern Lebanon County, helping his father, Abe, tend a herd of about 45 Holsteins.

Most recently, Lefever helped to manage a sheep, hay, and organic vegetable farm in Freder-

'Boot Camp' Teaches Ag Conservation Basics

FORT INDIANTOWN GAP (Lebanon Co.) — Pennsylvania agriculture conservation technicians (ACTs) took advantage of a training opportunity to attend a weeklong "boot camp" and learn the basics of agronomy or engineering in agriculture.

The participants, from organizations spanning Pennsylvania, are part of a program exclusive to the commonwealth.

In its second year, the program added 25-30 new positions when a special appropriation of more than $1 million was allotted to aid production farmers.

The majority of the appropriation dollars are going into the agriculture conservation technician program, said Agriculture Secretary Samuel Hayes, who opened the week. Hayes noted that the funds are tagged for farmers and the conservation commission.

He pointed out the importance of "infrastructure at the service point of the program," which is the one-on-one work of the technicians.

According to training coordinator Bill Bowers, Natural Resource Conservation Service (NRCS) Harrisburg, individual attention to the producer is the hallmark of the program.

Technicians give advice on soil erosion, soil health, water runoff, manure handling, or wildlife habitat. "The whole program is targeted to one-on-one assistance," he said.

Bowers said that participants are studying "what those of us in this business see as basic needs." The training is designed to dovetail with other training given by other organizations.

Noting the drop in the numbers of NRC employees, Bowers said that the program helps to fill that gap and move from fewer federal to more local employees.

The week was part of several training sessions conducted to help the ACTs further their education. A boot camp was conducted in March for ACTs with less on-the-job experience.

Pa. Dairies Benefit From DMLA Program

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Dairy farmers eligible for new relief funds from the federal government must sign up through their county USDA Farm Service Agency (FSA) office by April 30 in order to receive payment.

The additional payments offered through the new Dairy Market Loss Assistance Program (DMLA III) are for farmers with new dairy operations or farmers who received payments under DMLA II for less than 12 months of milk production.

Dauphin County dairyman Bill Capp Jr. said he signed up for the new program when it was first announced in late February of this year.

Along with his family and another hired couple, Capp manages 210 Holsteins with a rolling herd average of 26,000 pounds near Hershey.

Capp said it took him a few minutes to fill out the application and it was time well spent.

Within a week after applying for the funds, he received a

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
Report Supplied By USDA

Spring planting worries continue to offer strength to grain bids. Soybean bids moved slightly higher despite large U.S. planting acreage. Bids were mostly higher, Wheat 1 to 3 cents higher, Corn were steady to 3 cents lower, Sorghum steady and Soybeans 3 to 4 cents higher with Southern Iowa up much as 9 cents.

Wheat bids slightly higher as the value of the U.S. dollar is lower and concerns of spring planting, supported prices. Corn mostly steady with weather conditions the main talk in the corn pits. Lack of export interest and more moisture is expected heading into the weekend. Soybean bids were higher as fund short positions lend support to bids. However, larger U.S.

Expected planting and the large South American supplies coming out of the fields limited upturns. EXPORT SALES: PURCHASER COMMODITY TONNAGE DELIVERY DATE CCC Haiti 11.5 pct Hard Red Winter 9,800 May

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

ST. GEORGE, APRIL 23
ST. MARK, APRIL 25

MARK YOUR CALENDAR, BY GEORGE

Both St. George and St. Mark are associated with agricultural weather lore and spring planting. In Russia, it was said that if the birch leaves were the size of a farthing on St. George's Day, then there would be corn in the barn by fall. St. George (martyred c. A.D. 334) was a knight who, according to the "Golden Legend," was renowned for slaying a dragon that had been stealing sheep from local farmers. His success, where so many others had failed, was seen as a sign of his great faith. He became a patron saint of field hands, a symbol of chivalry, and a protector of women.

The just shall live by faith. –Romans 1 17

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Out of brass cleaner? Try lemon juice. Add a little salt (for its abrasiveness) for tough stains.

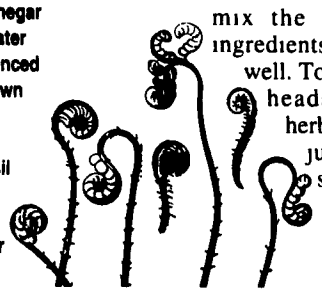
FIDDLEHEADS AND HERBS

4 cups rinsed and trimmed fiddleheads
8 tablespoons olive oil
2 tablespoons red-wine vinegar or tarragon vinegar
2 tablespoons water
1 clove garlic, minced
1/2 teaspoon brown sugar
2 drops Tabasco
1/2 teaspoon basil
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon ground pepper

Steam the fiddleheads over hot water for about 15 minutes or until tender. Meanwhile, mix the dressing ingredients and stir well. Toss fiddleheads in the herb dressing just before serving.

Makes 4 to 6 servings.



The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

When on St. George the rye will hide a crow a good harvest may be expected.

VECTOR TOBACCO UPDATE

PLANT POND UPDATE

- You will need to build a plant pond for your seedling trays when they arrive at the farm
- Level spot, outdoors in the sun (or on a wagon)
- Use tobacco rails - 11'x16' –don't need to be double high since we don't want them sitting down in a hole – this equals approx 2 acres of trays
- BUY – NEW CLEAN PLASTIC – NO HOLES, DIRT, NO CHEMICALS – can purchase at any farm supply store or hardware store approx. 14'x20'
- Hose -- to fill with 2"-3" water
- 1 acre of seedlings will be approx. 30 trays, tray measure 13"x26"
- Germination rate per tray will probably be 250-260 instead of 288 seedlings. Therefore you will receive more trays than originally thought!

Please have your plant pond ready on Monday of the week you ordered your plants. Put plants in pond immediately upon arrival at the farm. Reports from North Carolina are the plants look BEAUTIFUL!!

OPINION

Large-Scale Agriculture Opponents

For some time, radical environmentalists have been actively working against owner/managers — and proposed owner/managers — of large-scale, family owned, confinement operations.

These opponents of high-production agriculture seek out any legal means necessary to stop large-scale operations from appearing on the farm landscape. Yet time and again, it has been proven that these large-scale operations — which critics have been calling (unfortunately) "factory farms" — are necessary if family farms are going to prosper.

These opponents blame large-scale operations for the demise of the Chesapeake Bay. In the past decade, radical environmentalists, working closely with township managers, have pushed enough laws through to "tie the hands" of owners of the large-scale operations.

Farmers have always been the "first environmentalists," because of their own belief in land stewardship. It's the radical (mostly uninformed) environmentalists that concern us the most.

People who sign restrictive laws into place obviously don't worry very much about how much household income is spent on food. Or maybe it's even more simple than that — perhaps they believe food doesn't come from a farm but from the mini-mart or the chain grocery store down the road.

The Alliance for the Chesapeake Bay notes in their newspaper, the Bay Journal, for April that EPA's Office of Water is looking at draft rules that "could result in major changes in the way animal waste is managed in the Bay states and elsewhere in the watershed."

EPA is looking at hundreds of pages of proposed rules, noted the Journal. These rules would regulate and create a permitting process for the concentrated animal feeding operations, also known as CAFOs.

More regulations and "hand-tying" are not what producers need.

But more insidious activity has already been taking place in several townships and boroughs across the state. Several ordinances have been "rewritten" by board members, using templated legal documents, by many who don't appreciate or understand agriculture, to prevent large-scale animal operations from starting up.

They do so because of protests from a loud minority who simply don't understand or care about the necessity for large-scale animal enterprises. Even though the days of the Old MacDonald farm with two cows and a pig are history (out of sheer economic necessity), radical environmentalists simply don't care.

What is so dreadfully sad is the astounding lack of knowledge these opponents of large-scale animal agriculture have. They don't realize the outstanding environmental stewardship programs that these large-scale farms are required to follow. They don't realize how prominent animal welfare plays in protective confinement — after all, animals lost hits the producers in the wallet.

But the ignorance is the shame of it all, really. It flies in the face of farm viability.

I read your story in the April 7 issue quoting surveys from the International Food Information Council. My first reaction was to ask where this organization gets its funds. If it is truly a nonprofit organization not beholden to industry or consumer groups, why does it take any position on labeling of bioengineered foods? I quote your article, "IFIC is a nonprofit organization whose mission is to communicate

To Prepare For April Frost Protection

With alternating periods of warm, sunny weather and cold, frosty mornings, April is typically a time when fruit growers and gardeners need to be prepared to frost-protect to save flowers, buds, and tender vegetation.

Strawberries usually need frost protection because they typically bloom in April. The crop is very low-growing, where temperatures are usually the lowest.

Strawberry growers should monitor their crop so they can make preparations for frost protection as needed. It is important to remember that buds can be destroyed by cold weather, so just because your crop is not yet blooming does not mean you are not in danger.

It is important to know the critical temperatures for strawberries based on the stage of development. The critical temperature for a tight bud is 22 degrees Fahrenheit (F), for a popcorn bud it is 26.5 degrees F, for flowers it is 30 degrees F, and for fruit it is 28 degrees F.

A strawberry producer needs to calibrate any temperature-monitoring device to make sure it is accurate. Simple liquid-in-glass thermometers are the least expensive tools for this task and are effective. More expensive electronic systems, which measure temperatures at remote locations, are also available from scientific instrument companies.

Whatever temperature-sensing equipment you choose must be calibrated to ensure accuracy. This can be done by submerging the sensor or thermometer bulb in a container filled with crushed ice and water. This mixture should be stirred and there should be more ice than water. After 30 minutes, read the device. It should read within 1 degrees of 32 degrees F. Adjust the instrument as necessary.

Buds, blossoms, and berries can be protected by frost protection with overhead irrigation. This works because as water freezes, heat is released by the freezing process. As long as the bud, blossom, or berry is covered by a layer of freezing water, the temperature will remain at or near freezing.

The amount of water needed to get adequate frost protection will depend on the air temperature, humidity, and wind speed. Generally the lower the air temperature and dew point and/or the higher the wind speed, the greater the rate of freezing. This will then require a higher rate of water application to get adequate protection.

At a wind speed of 2-4 mph, a relative humidity of 50 percent, and a temperature of 24 degrees F, 0.30 inches of water per hour must be applied. To determine what you need to apply under your conditions, consult charts available from your irrigation supplier or in the "Penn State Commercial Berry Production Pest Management Guide." The guide is available for $10 at your county cooperative extension office.

To Comment On Federal Concentrated Animal Feeding Operation (CAFO) Regulations

At the end of March, Environmental Protection Administration (EPA) Administrator Christie Whitman announced an extension of the public comment period on proposed regulations designed to reduce water pollution from large animal feedlot operations. The comment period was extended through July 30.

EPA proposed new water pollution permitting controls in January that would apply to large concentrated animal feeding operations (CAFOs). CAFOs are defined as having 1,000 cattle or comparable "animal units" of other livestock.

Eight public meetings were conducted by EPA across the country in March to provide information and receive public comment on the proposal. EPA is providing the additional public comment opportunity based on comments received at these meetings, asking for more time to study and comment on the proposed Clean Water Act permitting requirements and CAFO definitions.

For more information, visit EPA's Website at http://www.epa.gov/owm/afo.htm or contact your county extension office.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WHAT HAS GOD SHOWN YOU?

Background Scripture:
Acts 10:1 through 11:18.
Devotional Reading:
Galatians 3:11-14.

It is an old story: we encounter God. Then we think about the encounter and try to put it in some kind of mental concept. Next, we devise ways and means of perpetuating the experience or at least its meaning to us. From earliest times of human existence this is how people have theologized, ritualized, and attempted to organize spiritual phenomena.

There is nothing wrong in this — in fact, God has designed us to do just this — so long as we remember that the theologies, rituals, and ecclesiastical structures are not the "treasure" but the "earthen vessels" of which Paul is writing, when he says: "But we have this treasure in earthen vessels to show that the transcendent power belongs to God and not to us" (1 Cor. 4:7).

The divine "treasure" is the encounter with God, while our even our most inspired and creative attempts to understand, duplicate, and capture it are but human means. Too often we cling to the "earthen vessels" and let them become a substitute for the "treasure."

We need to keep this in mind when we approach the story of Peter's dream and his summons to the home of Cornelius, the Roman centurian. When on the housetop Peter begins to dream and hears a voice telling him to satisfy his hunger by selecting something to eat from among the creatures in a great sheet lowered from the heavens, we can understand and appreciate Peter's response: "No, Lord; for I have never eaten anything that is common or unclean" (10:14). Peter's response was not one of prejudice or religious pride per se, but his attempt to remain true to the Jewish dietary laws which were an expression of his covenant with God.

What God Has Cleansed

The dietary laws were not inherently evil, but they could become and often were a barrier to hearing God's truth that pushes us beyond our creeds, rituals, and regulations. "What God has cleansed, you must not call common," said the voice from heaven — three times, the author of Acts assures us. We can understand why Peter was troubled by this dream: "Now while Peter was inwardly perplexed as to what the vision he had seen might mean, behold, the men that were sent by Cornelius . . . stood before the gate . . ." (v. 17).

We must also try to understand what a challenge these men presented to Peter. They were Gentiles and Peter's faith forbade him to associate with non-Jews.

So, ordinarily, he would have refused to accompany them, but when they told him an angel had directed Cornelius to send for him, Peter found he had to lay aside the earthen vessel of his religion and respond to the intervention of God. When he arrived at Cornelius's he demonstrated that he at last understood the meaning of his rooftop experience: "God has shown me that I should not call any man common or unclean" (10:28).

No Partiality

The light of God's "treasure" was able to break through the wall of "earthen vessels" — "Truly I perceive that God shows no partiality, but in every nation any one who fears him and does what is right is acceptable to him" (vs. 34,35).

While Peter was preaching to the people, God gave him a sign that he had understood rightly: "And the believers from among the circumcised who came with Peter were amazed, because the gift of the Holy Spirit had been poured out even on the Gentiles" (v. 45).

Good for Peter, we may want to say. But this story is not just about Peter, but us as well. Knowing myself and other disciples of Jesus Christ as I do, I can hardly believe that you, my readers, are not clinging to at least a few "earthen vessels" that keep you from realizing the "treasure" God wants to give us. The question is not "what did God show Peter?" but what is God trying to show us?

science-based information on food safety and nutrition to-...various groups." Nowhere in this article is any information about food safety and nutrition given by IFIC.

If information is not given to the consumer about food safety and nutrition by industry, by the farming industry, or anyone else, how can we expect to get a balanced response from the consumer? He doesn't know anything. And the manufacturers of genetically modified foods don't know about long-term effects of the foods they produce either. They haven't done these tests because the FDA doesn't consider genetically modified products as "new" foods and doesn't require these tests.

I personally support work on biologically modified plants and believe it will in the future produce superior products for all animals, including humans. However, I do not believe industry has done enough testing for safety and has not informed the public as to what is known and not known. And I would include in the same category the International Food Information Council and now also Lancaster Farming.

Lancaster Farmland Trust fully supports recent letters and editorials that have lauded George Delp's generosity and tremendous accomplishments.

Mr. Delp recognized early in the '90s that there was a critical need for farmland preservation in Lancaster County. As was typical of his response to important issues, he did not sit on the sidelines and watch the fray from afar. Rather, as a member and later a Trustee and Honorary Trustee, he devoted his personal energy and resources to the challenge. Leader that he was, he made a difference.

George Delp was one of the farsighted pioneers responsible for bringing agricultural land preservation into the mainstream of Lancaster County agriculture. We will miss him, but future generations will benefit immensely from his spirit and vision.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Investing Vs. Dairy Marketing: Lessons To Be Learned From Wall Street

• The biggest news in the world of investing is whether the market has "bottomed out."

As many of you already know, the stock market has taken a steep decline beginning the last quarter of 2000 and continuing into this year. It first started with high-priced technology stocks. Then, a slowing economy and reduced corporate earnings resulted in a general weakening of many stocks in the broader market.

You may be asking yourself, "what does this have to do with the dairy markets?" Hold on, I'm getting there!

One investment show I was watching on television featured a panel of stock market analysts who were discussing whether or not the stock market already bottomed out or is close to the bottom. They noted that history has shown that if you could invest in stocks at the bottom of the market, they would appreciate in value significantly over the next year. But the question debated was when will we see the bottom of the market?

One of the "experts" suggested that investors will never be able to pick the bottom. So he suggested they "average into" the bottom. In other words, buy some stock this week, wait a week or two, and then buy some more of the same stocks. You may not end up with the lowest price, but you will be pretty close to it.

I think this discussion has implications for the dairy industry. For the past month I have been recommending dairy producers consider locking in a portion of their milk supply over the next 5-8 months. I estimated that a dairy producer in the Northeast federal order today can lock in at more than $2.30 per CWT higher milk prices for the remainder of this year when compared to last year.

Do you know why everyone didn't rush out to their cooperatives and lock in these prices? Many dairy producers already answered this for me, "cause they are waiting for milk prices to go up $3 or $4 per CWT higher than last year."

Nobody wants to lock in a milk price only to find out the market went higher. But dairy producers should consider this strategy of "averaging into the market."

Pick the months you are most worried about. For me, that would be June through November. April is just about made, and May will likely continue to be strong for milk prices.

Focus on the outer months. Then start to lock in a portion of each month. Start with locking in 25 percent of your milk this week for the months of June through November. Then wait a week or two and lock in another 25 percent. And so forth. You may end up locking in say 75 percent of your September milk after 4 to 6 weeks. But your "average" milk price may be higher than if you did it all today.

However, if the market weakens, your average milk price could also be lower too. This strategy may have appeal to those producers who (a) worry about their milk prices, and (b) are concerned about locking in milk prices that are too low.

Average Farm Feed Costs for Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

Weather Protect Weed Control for Top Yields

FIELD NOTES

Weather is one of the most important factors affecting weed control in corn today Dry, wet or cold weather can lead to erratic weed control, especially with soil-applied herbicides

Herbert Roos and Jim Campbell have taken steps to weather-protect their weed control by switching from inconsistent preemergence programs to using a planned post program with DuPont™ Basis Gold® herbicide They have seen their decision pay off in more reliable control of both grasses and broadleaves—as well as award-winning yields in the 2000 National Corn Yield Contest

Unlike soil-applied herbicides, Basis Gold® doesn't need rain to deliver burndown control of emerged grasses and broadleaves With a passing shower, the residual activity kicks in to control foxtails, waterhemp, giant ragweed, pigweeds, velvetleaf and lambsquarters, and helps keep fields clean through harvest When growers look at costs, Basis Gold® is up to $3 per acre less than the leading competitive program

"We have had real good luck with Basis Gold®," says Roos, a first-place yield winner in Illinois

"It seems like the preplant treatments will play out, and then the waterhemp and foxtail come in late We haven't seen Basis Gold® run out, even in years with heavy rainfall"

Sandbur, lambsquarters and cocklebur are among the major weed problems for Campbell, who farms near Canton, Mo Basis Gold® has proven itself effective and crop safe—something that Campbell notes is not always the case with a preemergence program

"I've had times with a pre-only program where we went two to three weeks without rain and it never activated By the time we got rain, the weeds were too big to control," says Campbell, a third-place yield winner in Missouri "Basis Gold® doesn't affect the corn one bit We can spray corn four to ten inches tall, and it just keeps on growing It just does a fantastic job"

PFAF, Nationwide Sponsor Ninth Annual Golf Classic

MILLIE BUNTING
Market Staff

CAMP HILL (Dauphin Co.) —"Sowing the seeds of our future" is not just the slogan but the driving force of the Pennsylvania Friends of Agriculture Foundation (PFAF).

The largest fundraising event of the group is an annual golf tournament.

The Ninth Annual Golf Classic, sponsored by the Pennsylvania Friends of Agriculture and Nationwide Insurance, will be June 25 at the West Course of the Country Club of Hershey.

Co-chairmen for this year's tournament are Richard L. Prether and Joseph R. Patti from the public relations staff of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau. Reservations are open until June 11 and can be made by calling Jackie Wimberly at (717) 761-2740.

The future of agriculture lies in educating our youth, agricultural research and technology, and the preservation of farmland. To promote these goals, the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau created the Foundation in the mid-1980s to provide funds for educational, scientific, and charitable programs related to agriculture.

"Agriculture in the Classroom" is probably the Foundation's most well-known project. Each summer, teachers are offered a one-week accredited course at Penn State's main campus, where they learn how to use agriculture in the classrooms for kindergarten through sixth grades.

PFAF partners with individuals and county Farm Bureau associations to provide scholarships to teachers in both public and private schools to attend the accredited continuing education course. More than 800 teachers have attended since the program began in 1992.

Marlin R. Miller, PFAF executive director, said that PFAF funds several other programs which involve agricultural education. They contribute on an annual basis to the program called "Food, Land, and People," which was developed in California and adapted to run in schools throughout Pennsylvania with the aid of extension personnel. They also provide funds for Penn State's Rural Leadership Program and the Ag Awareness Foundation, plus scholarships for students at Delaware Valley College and Penn State.

PFAF also finances a class for teachers called "Seed Sense," which is part of the Penn State course. They provide a packet of lesson plans and resource materials on agriculture to city and suburban schools.

Delaware Valley College To Host Annual A-Day April 28-29

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.) — Delaware Valley College will host its annual A-Day celebration April 28-29 from 9 a.m.-5 p.m., rain or shine, here on the college campus.

Now in its 53rd year, A-Day is totally coordinated and run by a team of students who are advised by a panel of faculty, staff, or administration members.

A-Day showcases the students' accomplishments over the past year, plus student club exhibits and demonstrations in a country fair-type setting. Featured attractions include a craft show, equipment, display, hayrides through the college's orchards and farms, pony rides, an animal exhibit, contests of skill, and a variety of food prepared by the student clubs and organizations.

In addition, there is always musical entertainment on the main stage from the DelVal band and chorale and other talented musicians. An estimated 50,000 visitors attend A-Day.

All of the proceeds from the event go directly to student scholarships and the student clubs and organizations participating in the weekend. A-Day is the largest fund raiser in which the college's clubs and organizations participate all year.

Mandatory Livestock Price Reporting

A proposed rule and invitation for comment by the Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS) of USDA to implement the 1999 Livestock Mandatory Reporting Act was published in the Federal Register on Fri., Mar. 17.

The simple message of the legislation is that a small segment of the livestock industry (bovine, porcine and ovine) has required the packing and processing industry to report livestock purchases and sales of meat to a government agency, electronically, two or three times daily, or be penalized for failure to do so with extortion-like civil penalties.

The stated purpose of the legislation is "to ensure that small farmers and ranchers have a full and fair opportunity to compete in an increasingly concentrated agricultural economy," Agriculture Secretary Glickman said in a statement.

Sounds pretty straight forward. But the fact is that this voluminous, prescriptive regulation will be a nightmare to implement and probably won't help small farmers and ranchers at all.

The AMS proposal reaches beyond the expectations of the legislation in many respects. It raises many more questions than it answers. It includes an extensive reporting system for the lamb industry. Quite frankly, at face value, the system being proposed will be so cumbersome and complicated that its negative impact is expected to be much worse than anticipated. Those affected directly are livestock packers and product processors and importers who slaughter an average of 125,000 cattle, 100,000 swine and/or 75,000 lambs per year. Importers who annually import an average of 5,000 metric tons of lamb meat are also required to report.

Although the government plans to aggregate the reported prices and issue electronic reports two or three times daily, USDA is still seeking input from the livestock and meat industry on how this new information would best be reported back to the industry. It remains to be seen if they will be able to make anything out of the reams of mandatory data the price police will whip the industry into producing.

The National Meat Association (NMA) vociferously opposed this legislation as it was developed last year. One hearing was held before the Agriculture Committee in the U.S. Senate at which NMA testified. The bill eventually was attached to an appropriations bill and became law without the benefit of full discussion.

NMA and its Washington-based counsel, with the input from key members, is developing a summary that will be made available to all members. If you would like a copy of this enormous proposed rule visit NMA's files page it at www.nmaonline.org/download AMS has provided additional information at http://www.ams.usda.gov/lsg/price.htm.

Financially Strong, Allied Producers Cooperative Says It Won't Sell Out

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

JOHNSTOWN (Cambria Co.) — At a dinner meeting, Dave Myers, president of the Allied Milk Producers Cooperative, Inc., said, "We are staying independent," Myers told the group. "Allied is strong financially. We are not going to sell out to national."

Myers said, "We are not going to be under the umbrella of DMI (Dairy Management, Inc.). We are very committed to staying independent of them."

Myers later explained that the unified advertising program of the national organization is what Allied Milk Producers Cooperative, Inc. is opposed to. The advertising money would bypass markets such as Johnstown-Altoona and instead target metropolitan areas such as Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, and Baltimore.

"We are doing a lot with a small amount of money," said Myers. "We still support the local (dairy promotion) committees," he added, highly commending the volunteers who work for them.

The dinner meeting for members of Allied from nine counties was conducted recently at the Johnstown Masonic Temple.

Farmers compose the Allied board and the decisions they make to further promote dairy products to the general public are well thought out and expeditiously discussed. It is a responsibility they take very seriously.

Allied Milk Producers Cooperative strongly backs the Dairy Princess Program and Ag in the Classroom. County dairy princesses attending the meeting each received an additional $300 based on their having so far met all the requirements expected of them.

These were Misty Claypoole, Armstrong County; Sherry Plummer, Jefferson County; and Lacey Coleman, Somerset County.

From Bedford, Blair, Clearfield, Indiana, and Westmoreland counties, their counterparts who were unable to attend were Amy Zembower, Diana Bigelow, Marsha Curry, Jessica Lashinsky, and Jamie McQuaide.

Melinda Wolfe, Pennsylvania State Dairy Princess from the SUN Area, officially thanked Allied for its support of the dairy princess program.

"I believe in the positive future of this industry," said the statewide promoter, a student at the Bloomsburg University.

Amy Mearkle, Bedford County, a former dairy princess and state alternate now employed by Channel 10 television in Altoona, was mistress of ceremonies.

"Once a princess, always a promoter," she said. Mearkle said that her perspective of agriculture is an asset for farm news on the early morning show.

Getting children to understand where milk comes from has always been a top goal set for the Allied organization. That is why school visits the princesses make are so important, in addition to mall promotions and special events.

Children are very responsive to the young women who enter their classrooms wearing the enviable and admired tiara.

"A princess makes a big difference in promotion," Dave Myers, Allied president, told the group. He noted there are cases where farmers on school board panels also carry influence.

Milk, as opposed to colas, is a healthy drink for people from birth to old age.

"We hope we can get them drinking milk for life," said Myers, about students and local sport fans.

Serving on the board are Fred Shankle, vice president, Bedford County; Jan Itle, treasurer, Cambria County; Richard Kaufman, Somerset County; and Jim Scott, Indiana County.

Dorothy Naugle is the dairy marketing specialist.

Dorothy Bromley, extension educator and family living agent from the cooperative extension office in Somerset, presented "The E.coli Risk When Cows and Kids Come Together."

Bromley said she grew up on a farm and is interested in promoting milk. She thanked farmers for their generosity in hosting school groups visiting their farms.

"Keep in mind there is a bit of a risk," she said.

Cloven-hoofed animals such as cattle, goats, deer, and bison can shed the E.coli bacteria in their manure.

Those most at risk for E.coli bacteria are the young, because their immune system is not built up; the elderly because their immune system is wearing out; and pregnant women, whose immune systems are protecting two.

Children tend to touch everything at the farm where they usually are treated to a snack before departing back to school.

"An effective control is putting up a barrier from hand to mouth," Bromley said.

That would be washing hands for 20 seconds in warm water with regular bar or liquid soap and drying with a paper towel. This responsibility is the teachers.

In advance of the visit, the farmer can work with the teacher to stress the importance of the children washing their hands. Another possibility is having a snack time first and the tour last. Or farmers may limit access to some areas and not take the children there.

"Don't let them go anywhere unsupervised," said Bromley.

In recent weeks the threat of foot and mouth disease has found such restrictions and greater ones already implemented by most farmers whose facilities were accustomed to hosting neighborly tours. They want folks to understand where their food comes from.

Bromley also used volunteers to demonstrate the speed with which bacteria is passed from one person to another.

Carol and Larry Barnick of Jennerstown, Somerset County, were introduced by virtue of the astonishing order they gave for Allied's annual cheese and butter sale. Last time it was conducted, Carol Barnick ordered 1,740 pounds of products, Naugle said.

When asked about it later, Carol said: "All I do is make a couple of phone calls to friends and relatives and it just escalates.

"We eat a lot of pizzas," she reported of her own household.

Carol herself gets a case of butter and a block of mozzarella cheese which she grates and freezes in separate packages.

Naugle reported billboard cheese promotions and the cheese identification contests popular at schools and senior citizen centers and in television and radio commercials.

Allied Milk Producers Cooperative, Inc. is a major sponsor of the Keystone State Games, where the official drink is milk.

Allied supports the county promotion committees that are holding fundraisers at festivals such as Mountain Craft Days in Somerset, the Folk Festival in Springs, and at county fairs.

The place mats Allied has available appear to be "dairy fun" indeed, with cheese scramblers, multiple choice cheese trivia, and a word find.

Farmers Union Urges Reform Of Estate Tax

WASHINGTON, D.C. — National Farmers Union has urged congressional leaders to adopt responsible estate tax reform that provides immediate help to families, farmers and small business owners.

"Congress has a real opportunity to address meaningful tax reform that helps our hard working family farmers and ranchers and small business owners with relief immediately, rather than waiting for possible repeal down the road that may still subject their heirs to capital gains tax. The other proposals also provide a windfall to America's wealthiest families, jeopardizing our ability to address other national priority issues such as education, health care and the rural economy," said NFU President Leland Swenson.

Farmers Union urges Congress to adopt an estate tax reform package that immediately:

- Increases the exemption to a minimum $4 million of net estate value per individual ($8 million per couple, indexed for future inflation).
- Retains stepped-up basis.
- Simplifies the exemption qualification rules.
- Modestly reduces current rates on the non-exempt portion of estates.
- Expands the current annual gift allowance to $25,000.

"Our plan will maintain fiscal responsibility and ensure the availability of resources necessary to address our many national priorities. We urge Congress to accomplish this goal," said Swenson.

Nominees Requested For Prestigious Pacesetters Award

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders is looking for innovators and visionaries in the dairy industry to honor with its prestigious Pacesetter Award. Those who fit that profile can be nominated for the award at any time during the year.

"We created the award to honor individuals and organizations who contribute significantly to a positive image for Pennsylvania's dairy industry," said Ralph Heffner, chairperson of the Pacesetters Award committee. "It's designed to recognize the dynamic leadership responsible for building a strong and rewarding future for Pennsylvania's dairy producers and others involved in the industry."

Past recipients of the Pacesetters Award are Land O'Lakes, Inc., Carlisle, and Luke, Mike, and Tony Brubaker and their families of Brubaker Farms, Mount Joy. Nominees should distinguish themselves through accomplishments or programs that:

- Bring positive recognition or advancement to Pennsylvania's dairy industry.
- Create positive attitudes about the industry among producers and their families.
- Recognize dairy food processing and distribution businesses that maintain and invest in a long-term commitment to the Pennsylvania dairy food industry.
- Create growing recognition by consumers that a healthy growing dairy industry is positive for everyone who lives and works in Pennsylvania.

The Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders will recognize up to three recipients each year. A producer selected to receive the award this year may be honored at Ag Progress Days in August.

For more information and to receive an application, contact Alan Bair, facilitator, Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders, at (717) 948-6328 or nab4@psu.edu.

SCHNUPP'S Flame KISSED

ROASTING IS SUPERIOR TO OTHER METHODS OF HEAT PROCESSED GRAIN

~ IT'S ECONOMICAL - The cost to operate a flame roaster is lower than other types of processing equipment This makes roasting grain a more efficient method.

~ IT PURIFIES - Only a flame roaster can effectively remove molds and reduce toxins to tolerant levels As the individual grain rotates through the open flame, the mold dust around it is destroyed

~ IT'S UNIFORM - Having the grain pass through the open flame and properly steeped, gives it a uniform treatment

~ IT'S PROFITABLE - Custom roasting on your farm
*Gives you the ability to feed your own grain, not someone elses
* Eliminates trucking expenses
* No mill charges .shrinkage, storage and handling
* When grain needs to be purchased, you can have it roasted on your farm and know how it is processed

Poultry Industry Honors Outstanding Individuals, Growers

GEORGETOWN, Del. — Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. (DPI), the trade association for the peninsula's broiler chicken industry, conducted its annual booster banquet recently in Salisbury, Md.

Awards were presented to 19 outstanding poultry growers and three individuals who have made significant contributions over the years to the chicken industry.

In addition, DPI announced the results of its annual fund drive, its membership campaign that raises funds to allow DPI to continue its work to strengthen the chicken industry. Fund drive Chairman Dr. Hank Engster told the audience of more than 1,500 that cash and pledges totaled $461,954. Engster expressed appreciation to all DPI members for their continuing support during these difficult times for the chicken industry.

DPI's most prestigious award, the J. Frank Gordy Sr. Delmarva Distinguished Citizen Award, was presented to Selbyville, Del. businessman Warren H. Mumford. Mumford and his family-owned business, Mumford Sheet Metal Works, has been a supplier to the chicken industry since 1935. He and his family built the original and replacement giant fry pans that have been used at the annual Delmarva Chicken Festival since 1950.

Mumford is a longtime member of the DPI board of directors and for many years has been an active solicitor during the DPI Fund Drive. A longtime member of the Selbyville Lions Club. Mumford is known as a willing supporter of the Selbyville community.

The DPI Medal of Achievement for an elected official went to Delaware State Senator Thurman G. Adams of Bridgeville. Adams has been a strong advocate for the poultry and agricultural industries for decades. As a member of the Delaware Senate since 1972, he has always been willing to work on behalf of the chicken industry. Adams has been active in many community and professional organizations and is among Delaware's most highly respected leaders.

The DPI Medal of Achievement for a nonelected person was presented to University of Delaware poultry disease researcher Dr. Jack Gelb. During his more than 20 years with the university, Gelb has conducted research on several economically important diseases that affect Delmarva's chicken industry. He is one of the world's leading authorities on avian bronchitis. Gelb has served on DPI committees during his tenure at the University of Delaware and has made countless presentations to DPI meetings.

Since 1966, DPI has recognized Delmarva's outstanding poultry growers at the booster banquet. Selected from nearly 2,500 poultry growers this year were:

ASA Makes Recommendations For Farm Bill

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The American Soybean Association (ASA) presented specific domestic farm policy recommendations to the House of Agriculture Committee in Washington, D.C., as Congress considers options for the next Farm Bill.

ASA First Vice President Bart Ruth testified before the Committee on behalf of the 27,000 ASA members as well as the National Sunflower Association and the U.S. Canola Association.

Ruth's testimony is based on months of analysis of farm policy alternatives. While citing incremental progress in enacting the economic, trade, tax, and regulatory agenda that was supposed to accompany the 1996 Farm Bill, most of the agenda is yet to be accomplished, Ruth said. As a result, prices for most major commodities are so low that farmers received 30 percent of gross farm income, and 60 percent of net farm income, in the form of government payments last year.

"The need to address agriculture's unfinished agenda as a top national priority is evidenced by the desperate situation in the farm economy today," said Ruth, a Rising City, Neb., soybean and corn farmer. "We believe agriculture's long-term competitiveness and prosperity are integrally tied to expanded trade opportunities, enhanced demand for agricultural products, increased research, and tax and regulatory relief." Ruth continued, "Even if major progress is made in the near future, it will be years before the economic and trade environment for America's farmers and ranchers is substantially improved. As a result, we must approach writing the next Farm Bill with the assumption that conditions during the next several years could remain much as they are today."

The oilseed producer organizations recommend that the next Farm Bill continue portions of the current bill. Those provisions include full and unrestricted planting flexibility, continuation of non-recourse marketing loans, no statutory authority to impose acreage reduction programs or set-asides, and no authority to establish government or farmer-owned reserves for oilseeds. "Providing these elements are continued, we support providing programs for oilseed producers that are equitable to programs for other major crops," Ruth said.

EPA Administrator Extends Large CAFO Comment Period

WASHINGTON, D.C. — In March, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Christie Whitman announced her intention to extend the public comment period for 75 additional days on a Jan. 12 proposal to reduce water pollution from large animal feedlot operations.

The 75-day extended comment period will allow public comments through July 30.

EPA proposed new water pollution permitting controls in January that would apply to large concentrated animal feeding operations (CAFOs), typically defined as having 1,000 cattle or comparable "animal units" of other livestock.

Throughout March, EPA conducted eight public meetings across the country to provide additional information and encourage public comment on the proposal. EPA is providing the additional public comment opportunity based on comments received at these meetings asking for more time to study and comment on the proposed Clean Water Act permitting requirements and CAFO definitions.

DEP Seeks Input On Pennsylvania's Valuable Water Resources

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Four state agencies are inviting all Pennsylvanians to participate in an exciting opportunity to help shape the future of the Commonwealth's valuable water resources.

Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) Acting Secretary David E. Hess today asked residents to participate in a forum called "Water Is Our Future Draining Away?," to discuss Pennsylvania's current and future water resource needs.

The forum will be held at 6 p.m., April 23, at the Rachel Carson State Office Building, Main Auditorium, 400 Market St., Harrisburg.

"The information gathered at these forums will help set policies to protect water as a resource and an economic asset," Hess said. "We encourage citizens to come out and provide their input on water issues in their communities."

DEP, in partnership with the departments of Community and Economic Development, Conservation and Natural Resources and Agriculture, has scheduled 15 public forums across the Commonwealth. The Susquehanna River Basin Commission also is assisting.

The forums will outline basic water resource challenges and opportunities, both locally and statewide. They also will help to raise awareness while gathering citizens' thoughts on water resource issues in Pennsylvania.

In addition to the public forums, DEP has created a web page with a wealth of related water information that will include a running summary of issues raised at the forums, links to upcoming events, videos and publications, news clips from around the state on water and a message board where people can discuss water issues online.

A new publication, "Water is Life," which raises provocative questions about water in a collection of essays by a variety of authors, will be available at the forums and online.

"After the forums, DEP will publish a summary of public input on our website," Hess said. "This information will help DEP to better understand the issues that Pennsylvania faces as it works to protect and conserve its precious water resources."

Forums will begin at 6 p.m. with informative exhibits and displays, followed by presentations and open discussion. An information exchange table will be available for anyone who would like to display related water resource materials.

For more information on the forums, visit DEP through the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us or directly at www.dep.state.pa.us (direct-LINK "water forums").

BURLINGTON, Vt. — Forty-six farmers in the Northeast were recently awarded $191,068 in grants under the Northeast Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education (SARE) Farmer/Grower program.

Awards ranged from $551 to explore whether pumpkins plants are a viable forage for sheep to $13,839 for the development of a year-round market for value-added farm products through freezing and vacuum packaging.

The average grant was $3,980. Projects are chosen for their relevance, innovative design, and potential impact on the sustainability of farms across the region.

Northeast SARE supports projects in sustainable agriculture for farmers, researchers, and educators, and is a program of the USDA. The region includes Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, West Virginia, and Washington, D.C.

Breeding, Gestation Management Class Offered On Pork's Website

DES MOINES, Iowa — A self-study breeding and gestation management course will be available via the Internet on pork's website from May 14 to July 6. The eight-week course is part of the Distance Learning Project of the National Pork Board.

"Through this checkoff-funded course, participants can learn or review basic breeding and gestation management techniques anywhere they have internet access, such as their home or workplace," explained Jenny Felt, special programs manager.

"Current lifestyles and demands on your time sometimes make it difficult to find the time to take courses needed to help you advance in your job, to work toward a degree, or to have fun."

If you have access to a computer with the appropriate hardware requirements and computer applications, then online courses can be completed at your own pace. By being offered on the Internet, the breeding and gestation management course is a convenient continuing education option for ag professionals. The curriculum is for people working in the breeding and gestation areas of any pork production operation.

The course has six lessons, each with a self-graded quiz. Each lesson can be taken at one's own pace. When participants complete all quizzes and an online evaluation form, they will be issued a certificate.

Each person registered for the course will be assigned a username and password to access the lessons for the breeding and gestation management curriculum. The registration fee is $35 for the first registrant from each operation and $25 for each additional registrant. Registration is due by May 1. The class is limited to 250 students.

For more information on the course, visit pork's website or contact Felt at 515-223-2771. At www.porkboard.org, go to the "Especially for Producers" section and select Distance Learning.

Clinic Can Help With Plant Problems

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The public can bring sick plants, problem weeds and insects for expert diagnosis to the BioHio open house, May 10-12, at the College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences at Ohio State University.

Members of the C. Wayne Ellett Plant and Pest Diagnostic Clinic will examine samples and give professional advice on how to handle the problem.

"We'll set up a table outdoors with a display so visitors can learn about the clinic and what we do," said clinic program manager Nancy Taylor, a plant pathologist. "It will be under the roof on the west side of Kottman Hall."

"We can usually solve the problem right there," Taylor said.

Persons who don't make it to BioHio should first take their problems to their local extension office.

Action Of The Auction Lures, Keeps Employees At Sales Stables

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

Editor's note: This article is part two of a two-part series on New Holland Sales Stables. Since the business encompasses many facets of agriculture, the articles feature several people with associations to the sales stables.

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — There must be something about the livestock auction business.

Something about working with animals, or watching the market, or socializing with farmers, or hearing the auctioneer's chant, or buying the best animals. Something that could create employee loyalty, stability, and long-lasting careers.

Following Father's Footsteps

Wayne Weidman of New Holland has worked at the sales stables since March 1944, while his father worked there. One day a week, Weidman would be picked up from his one-room school when he was 13 years old to work from 1 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the auction.

He began leading cows and calves through the ring. "That was when we had both dairy and beef sales in one day," said Weidman, "We didn't have separate barns for calves, so we sold them after the beef." Although the hours were long, "I just liked the work," he said.

Even after 57 years in the business, he still remembers his beginning salary. "I got 75 cents an hour, $7.50 a day . . . $7.35 take-home pay," he said.

He also remembers beginning work at six or seven in the morning on Thursday and getting home on Friday evening. Around 1955 he became barn foreman and was responsible for "keeping everybody busy."

Watching others taught him how to clip horses and dairy cows. "I always liked improving the animals," said Weidman. He quickly became comfortable with the process as he helped to clip 100 horses every Sunday to get ready for Monday's sale.

Preparation for Monday's horse sale usually entailed watering, bedding, feeding, and currying the horses. Tuesday, then, was a cleanup day. "We cleaned out the stables by hand, hauling manure out with a dump cart and a horse when the stables were smaller."

Wednesdays he helped "take in" dairy cows for the following sale, which meant tying, clipping, and milking the animals by hand. Thursdays featured the dairy sale. In 1950, when the beef barn was built, the dairy sale was moved to Wednesdays. Fridays, then, was another cleanup day.

January through March became draft horse season, as work horses from mostly Iowa and Kansas came in a steady clip — five railroad cars every week were unloaded at the sale barn.

According to Weidman, "Farmers bought them for spring work. The bulk of them sold their horses in the fall and bought new ones in the spring so they didn't have to winter them."

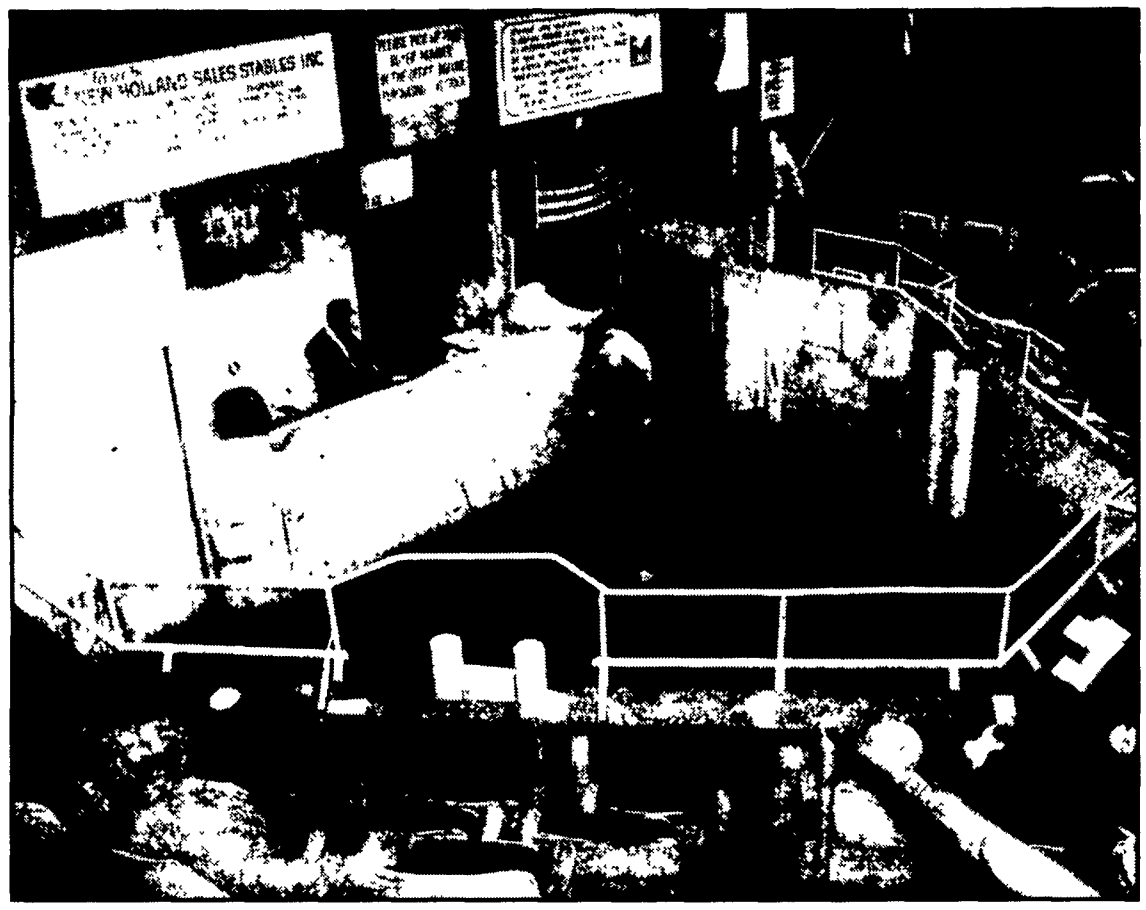
The sales stables did not always have a ring and surrounding bleachers, said Weidman, who remembers a platform which buyers stood on an look at the animals being led around below.

Weidman has seen changes and shifts in his years in agriculture. "Herefords used to be the main beef breed, then Charolais, and now blacks and black baldies," he said. "There was a time when some buyers bought nothing but Hereford cattle."

Another change has been the steady decrease in the number of buyers at the sale. "There was a time when the beef ring was nearly full to the top of buyers," he said. "Now there's fewer 'little' butchers buying two, three, four, or ten animals."

Even with this trend, however, Weidman predicts that there will always be a need for the sale barn, as farmers will still need a place to sell their animals.

He also sorted fed cattle for many years, "before we had a roof over that area," he said. Sorting cattle, in fact, is one of his favorite aspects of the job. "I always enjoyed seeing how to line the cattle up for size. I try to put the better ones in one pen and the rest in another."



Every Thursday the fed steers, feeder steers and heifers, then cull cows keep the ring filled from 9:30 a.m. until 8 p.m. An average of 1,300-1,400 head go through the ring on Thursdays. Here Dale Stoltzfus, auctioneer, David Kolb, at the computer, and ring man Ron Ranck keep the sale moving during the afternoon.

Dairy farmers deliberate on which animals to purchase to increase their herds.

An Order Buyer's View

H. Paul Good, Fivepointville, estimates that he was 20 or 21 when he began buying animals. Now 89, Good still spends his afternoons at the sale barn buying animals.

Over the years he has spent many such afternoons at the barn buying animals for customers since his first purchase, a $38 heifer at the nearby Green Dragon auction.

Following in the footsteps of his father, also an order buyer, Good is a familiar face around the barns. Ironically, he didn't chose the business as much as the business "chose" him when

At the Monday horse sale, approximately 200-250 horses are sold. The supply, while mostly riding horses and ponies, includes a few draft and driving horses also.

Pa. Performance Tested Bull Sale Posts Results

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Meat Animal Evaluation Center wishes to announce the results from Pennsylvania's 28th annual Performance Tested Bull Sale.

Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Samuel E. Hayes addressed the crowd with a welcome from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and expressed his continued support for the performance testing programs and his commitment to the completion of the new testing facility at Rockspring.

The dead of the College of Agricultural Sciences, Dean Robert Steele, welcomed everyone to Penn State University and to the facilities of the college.

The 151 registered bidders from nine states and Puerto Rico were first offered the Angus bulls. The lot number one Angus bull, the top-indexing Angus, consigned by Marlin and Steve Paul, was a full brother to the top-indexing Angus bull in last year's sale.

These bulls were sired by a top-performing bull that was purchased in the 1997 Performance tested bull sale. This accomplishment is a testament to the value and to the high heritability of growth rate of performance testing.

This bull and the lot number 10 was selected by George Hempt of New Cumberland for the winning bid of $3,100 each. These $3,100 bids were the second highest prices paid for an Angus bull. The lot number 10 bull was consigned by John Corle.

The highest-selling bull overall was lot number six Angus bull consigned by Monica Feeser. Mark Sanders, Gettysburg, offered $3,500 for this popular selection. The 29 Angus bulls sold for an average of $2,105.

Seven red Angus bulls sold for an average of $1,386. The top-selling red Angus, consigned by John Myers, sold to Brown's Ranch of Gettysburg for $2,000.

The top-indexing and the top-selling Simmentals consigned by H. Robert McQuiston of Haven Woods Farm sold for $2,600 to Deer Pond Farm of Port Matilda. This bull received the award presented by the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association for the top-indexing bull of all breeds.

This bull also set a new all-time record for Pennsylvania in average daily gain on test. He gained 6.32 pounds per day through the 112-day test. The second highest selling Simmental was the moderately framed bull consigned by Robert Simpson. This bull sold for export to Puerto Rico for $2,400.

The 20 Simmental bulls sold for a total of $30,700 to record an average of $1,535.

Five Herefords in the sale sold for $7,500, to average $1,500. The award winning Hereford, the top-indexing bull of the breed, was nominated by Eugene Sapp and sold to Russell Robinson of Buckhannon, W.Va. for $1,500.

The top price paid for a Hereford was $1,650. Matthew Martin, Tafton, offered this bid for the bull bred by Paul and Bette Slayton of Bedford.

In the ring next was the very popular Charolais bull. After spirited bidding, the bull sold for $3,300 and was bought by Frank Valentin Balaguer, of Anasco, Puerto Rico.

This bull had the heaviest lifetime weight per day of age and the largest adjusted loin-eye over all bulls on test this year. This 1,500 pound plus yearling weight bull was bred by Raymond Bratton, McVeytown, who is the longest active participant in the bull performance testing programs.

The final bull offered for sale was a Limousin owned by Dave and Lynda Miller of Bedford. This red Limousin is also bound for Puerto Rico on the winning bid of $1,500.

Great Lakes Grazing Network Launches Website

MONONA, Wis. — The Great Lakes Grazing Network has recently launched the Website, www.glgn.org, to provide information targeted to grazers in the upper Midwest and Northeast.

The site features a publications section which includes listings of books and manuals that provide comprehensive information on grazing and pasture management as well as listings of fact sheets and articles on specific topics.

The specific topics include infrastructure, pasture/forages (grasses and legumes), animal husbandry, financial consideration, business planning, and environmental aspects of grazing livestock. Most of the resource information is available for viewing or downloading — if not, then there is information on how to order. There also is a section on teaching aids, including PowerPoint presentations.

Also included on this Website is information on how to contact grazing advocates in the Great Lakes region, the benefits of management intensive grazing, the Grazing Lands Conservation Initiative with national, regional and state contacts, direct marketing, links to other Websites, farm tours, grazing schools, and upcoming conferences.

The Great Lakes Grazing Network is a coalition of farmers and agricultural professionals from university, government, and environmental groups organized as independent working groups in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin, to assist with the improvement and advancement of managed grazing systems. Regional activities are coordinated to share information from research, education, training, policy, and outreach activities.

World Dairy Expo Not Canceled Because Of Foot And Mouth

MADISON, Wis. — The 35th World Dairy Expo will be Oct. 3-7 here at the Alliant Energy Center.

The World Dairy Expo Executive Committee concluded there was no reason not to proceed with the show despite the recent outbreak of foot and mouth disease in the United Kingdom and Europe.

World Dairy Expo is aware of the serious outbreak of foot and mouth disease in Europe and will implement a biosecurity system to lessen dairy cattle exhibitors' concerns. World Dairy Expo is in the process of working with the Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection, the USDA, and the Immigration Service to encourage appropriate steps are taken to protect the health of all animals at the show.

Foot and mouth disease has been found in many countries for decades. The development of the disease in the United Kingdom and Europe has focused attention on the continual need for the U.S. to be proactive in protecting domestic animal health. It is important to note that any infectious disease can be devastating to the dairy industry and appropriate steps should be taken to minimize that risk. Additional information regarding foot and mouth disease can be found at the USDA Website http://www.usda.gov/special/fmd/fmd.html.

For more information, contact World Dairy Expo at (608) 224-6455 or go online at http://www.worlddairyexpo.com.

Increase In Soy Acres Driven By Demand And Planting Flexibility

SAINT LOUIS, Mo. — U.S. producers are projected to plant 76.7 million acres of soybeans in 2001, up three percent from last year, according to a recently-issued U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) report.

If realized, this would be the largest planted area for soybeans on record.

While some analysts have speculated that this increase is due to the level of the soybean loan rate in relation to other commodities, the American Soybean Association (ASA) believes such analysis is flawed and overlooks enormous changes in demand, planting flexibility, and other factors.

"Domestic and world demand for soybeans during the last decade has been far greater than for any other commodity," said ASA President Tony Anderson, a producer from Mt. Sterling, Ohio. "Global usage of soybeans grew by 56 percent, compared to 27 percent for corn, 15 percent for rice, 7.5 percent for cotton, and only 6.2 percent for wheat. Even in the United States, soybean usage in the last decade outpaced every other commodity. U.S. usage of soybeans grew by 36 percent, compared to 27 percent for rice, 26 percent for corn, 16 percent for cotton, and a decline of almost five percent for wheat."

ASA attributes soybean acreage growth to the following factors:

• Greater growth in world and U.S. demand for soybeans than for other commodities.

• Introduction in the 1996 Farm Bill of unrestricted planting flexibility and decoupled income support payments that allowed producers to shift to agronomically and economically preferable crop rotations. Prior to 1996, soybean acres were constrained by farm program provisions that required producers to plant their farms to "program crops" (wheat, feed grains, cotton, and rice) to receive income support from the federal government.

• Relatively high soybean prices between 1995 and 1997 that induced producers to plant more soybeans. The season average price received by farmers for the 1995 crop was $7.35 per bushel, declining to $6.45 per bushel in 1996 and $5.35 per bushel in 1997. Since 1997, prices for all major commodities have been depressed, so there has been no inducement for farmers to shift acreage to other crops.

• Development of new soybean varieties in maturity groups that are much better suited to northern and western climates. In recent years, new soybean varieties have made production possible in colder and drier states where few soybeans were grown 10 years ago. Last year, virtually all of the expansion in soybean plantings occurred in the northern and western states of North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Nebraska, and Kansas.

• Prevalence of scab and other diseases affecting wheat and other crops. In major wheat states such as North Dakota, moving out of wheat production has been the only way to avoid reoccurrence of scab. Soybeans and other oilseeds have been among crops producers have turned to as they have battled disease problems.

• Unusually high costs of natural gas and fertilizer that are constricting corn production in the Midwest. Additionally, the continuing disruption of foreign and domestic corn markets and rising corn stocks resulting from the StarLink® debacle may be contributing to this year's projected decline in corn plantings and increase in soybean plantings.

"A final factor useful in judging whether the loan rate for a commodity is out of alignment relative to other crops is its stocks-to-use ratio," said Anderson. "Carryover stocks of soybeans this fall are expected to total about 12 percent of current domestic and export use. By comparison, corn stocks are projected at 20 percent of use, and wheat supplies will be 34 percent of use. Reducing the soybean loan rate would likely increase production of crops that are already in greater surplus."

In recent testimony before the House Agriculture Committee, ASA proposed setting the current national soybean loan rate of $5.26 per bushel as a floor in the next Farm Bill. ASA indicated it opposes any reduction of the soybean loan rate, because it provides a vital income safety net for producers. ASA strongly maintained that expansion of U.S. soybean acreage during the last five years has less to do with the loan rate compared to planting flexibility, growth in demand and usage for soybeans, and various agronomic production factors.

"Lowering the soybean loan rate would severely hurt soybean producers and significantly reduce overall net farm income," said Anderson. "Suggestions to lower the soybean loan rate are ill-considered and ill-advised. A better course would be for Congress and the Administration to adopt policies to expand trade and domestic demand that will get prices for all commodities above current loan levels.

ASA has identified a list of initiatives to bolster demand, ranging from food aid to commercial trade to use of biodiesel and other industrial uses for soybeans. We look forward to working with Congress and the Administration to implement this agenda."

Keystone Junior Beef Classic May 26-27

MERCER (Mercer Co.) — The Northwest Keystone Junior Beef Classic will be conducted at the Butler County Fairgrounds Memorial Day weekend, May 26-27.

This will be the 16th year for all breed steer and heifer show that has drawn cattle and exhibitors from five states.

The Northwest Classic gives youth under 21 years of age an opportunity to enter competition drawn from a larger area than usually seen at the county fairs in which they compete during the summer. Exhibitors do not have to be 4-H or FFA members to participate. A friendly, helpful atmosphere, along with a $12 entry fee make this the perfect preview show for beginning showmen.

Preregistration by May 1 is encouraged for inclusion in the show catalog. Late entries will be accepted but will have a $40 entry fee.

The three-day Memorial Day weekend allows Monday for rest and recuperation, since the open cattle show is scheduled on Sunday. Saturday's activities begin with a new feature "The Butler Blowout Maine-Anjou Show" will begin at noon. The always popular Classic Showmanship Contest is slated for 2 p.m. A Beef Cattle Judging Contest will be held after that, followed by a pizza party. A Trade Show featuring businesses that help sponsor the show will be open both days.

Sunday brings the real excitement when the steer and breeding classes are judged. In the heifer show, premiums will be paid for all classes, and trophies will be awarded for grand champion, reserve champion and bred and owned. Registered heifers will show by breed and commercial classes will be held for unregistered heifers. A prize of $200 will be awarded to the supreme champion heifer of the show. Reserve supreme champion heifer will receive $100.

The very popular county steer classes will again be offered for any county (from any state) that has five or more preregistered steers. County winners will win a jackpot of $10 times the number of steers shown in the class.

Clubs and county groups can easily coordinate plans for the group to participate, and someone from each county will win the jackpot. There is also an all others division, for those not having enough entries for a county class. The county champions will then compete with the all others champion for grand champion steer with a prize of $200, and reserve champion steer with a prize of $100.

The next planning meeting for the classic will be held April 24, 7:30 p.m., at the Mercer County Extension Center.

Entry forms will be mailed to past participants. For more information or entry forms, contact your county extension agent, or Alvin Vogel (724) 538-8413, or write Northwest Keystone Junior Beef Classic c/o Bob Calvert, Mercer County Extension Office, P.O. Box 530, Mercer, PA 16137.

Lancaster Farmland Trust Preserves Eight Farms Since January

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Lancaster Farmland Trust has preserved eight farms, totaling 414 acres, since January — a Trust milestone. Previously, the largest number of farms preserved in such a short period of time was in 1991 when the Trust preserved six farms, totaling 462 acres, by the end of April.

The farms are located in five different townships: three in Colerain Township; one in East Cocalico Township; one in Providence Township; one in Rapho Township; and two in Manheim Township. Both of the preserved farms in Manheim Township are part of joint preservation projects — one with the Lancaster County Agricultural Preserve Board and one with Manheim Township. The Trust has preserved 126 farms totaling 8,169 acres since 1988. Additionally, a 51 acre farm in Drumore Township is slated for preservation by month's end.

Lancaster Farmland Trust is a private, non-profit organization that relies on donations from individuals and organizations. The Trust's annual spring campaign, launched at the beginning of April, is designed to increase and broaden the base of support for the Trust's mission — preserving the rich and productive farmland of Lancaster County. The campaign also gives current members the opportunity to renew their membership, which can now be done on the Trust's Website: www.savelancasterfarms.org.

Lancaster County has surpassed the 40,000 acres preserved mark, which represents over 10 percent of the county's farmland. The county reached the 10,000 acres preserved mark in 1991, the 20,000 acre mark in 1995, and the 30,000 acre mark in 1999.

On Thurs., April 12, the Lancaster Farmland Trust and the Lancaster County Agricultural Preserve Board held an annual joint meeting at the Trust office, 128 East Marion Street, Lancaster.

Pa. Trains Potential Assessors For Program

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Forty people, including agriculture producers, extension personnel, conservation district personnel, and agency and ag industry representatives participated in the four-day On-Farm Assessment and Environmental Review (OFAER) Assessor training conducted at the New Brunswick Hotel, Lancaster, from March 27-30.

PennAg Industries Association and Lancaster, Chester, and Berks conservation districts supported the agriculture industry's effort to promote environmental stewardship, minimize livestock production impact on watersheds, improve public perception of livestock production, and move agriculture toward being a self-regulated industry by sponsoring the OFAER Program by the America's Clean Water Foundation.

Forty potential assessors were trained to provide livestock producers a confidential comprehensive and objective assessment of water quality, odor, and pest risk factors at their operations. Producer participation is voluntary and at no charge to the producer. The producer participation and farm specific information is kept strictly confidential.

The potential assessors will conduct assessments as teams of professionals across Pennsylvania.

The On-Farm Assessment and Environmental Review was initially developed for use in the pork industry. However, the assessment tools have been developed and refined to assess a wide variety of production facilities such as dairy, poultry, egg-laying, and open-lot cattle operations.

The four-day intensive training culminated with an on-farm assessment of a local poultry and dairy facility. Brubaker Farms, Mt. Joy, owned and operated by Luke Brubaker and his sons, Mike and Tony, volunteered their 600-cow dairy as a training site for assessors as well as a completed assessment by the OFAER program.

In addition, Wenger's Feed Mill, Inc., Rheems, volunteered a pullet house, as a training site, and a complete OFAER review. All of Wenger's Feed Mill, Inc. poultry facilities have completed the OFAER program.

The On-Farm Assessment and Environmental Review Program is a national program promoting the importance of sound environmental management of livestock operations in the U.S.

people simply began to give him orders and he worked to fill them.

Over the years, Good has watched prices rise. "Top driving horses bring $3,000. It used to be that $200 was a good price for a horse."

Order buying is more difficult these days, said Good. "Buying is much harder now since the animals are high-priced and there is so much money involved for the farmer," he said.

Not only the prices but also the market has evolved over the years for Good, who used to buy animals for butchers. "Inspection closed the doors on smaller butchers,' he said. "I could name a bunch of butchers I bought for that the government inspection did the same thing."

Clerking At The Auction

John Petersheim, Ronks, has worked at New Holland Sales Stables since 1967. After beginning his tenure at the auction by leading horses through the ring, Petersheim now divides his time between helping out at special horse sales and clerking the beef and dairy sales.

In the days before a special horse sale the barn is filled with dawn-until-dark activity. A blacksmith removes shoes and trims hooves, employees clip and curry, and owners bring in their draft horses and mules or driving horses for the upcoming auction.

"We have a lot of fun around here on days like this," Petersheim said.

In his tenure at the sale barn he has seen the rise of animal prices as the market keeps pace with demand. "We sold horses up to $800 apiece when I first started, and that was a high price. Now we sell them anywhere from $1,500-2,000 apiece, and that can go higher," he said.

He believes the market for horses will remain steady in the coming years, especially in Lancaster, where demand for draft horses for fieldwork or driving horses from the Amish and Mennonite communities makes the auction a hot spot.

Historically, the horses came from the southern and western states because "Lancaster's ground is too high-priced to raise horses, and we're more able to farm it," he said. Those states are still the suppliers of the market, he said.

Another change in the business is the look of the horses. Petersheim believes that the conformation quality of the animals going through the ring has improved.

A love of horses helped to draw Petersheim to the auction. "I always did like a public auction," he said. "I used to come in a good bit, so they asked me to help. When I came in I just couldn't get away from it."

He said, "It's jam-packed full sometimes on Mondays," he said, estimating that the seating surrounding the ring holds 500-600 people. "Our special Friday sales there are a good bit more people. They come to visit and to buy and sell."

Approximately 200-250 horses are sold each Monday, mostly riding horses and ponies with a few draft and driving horses.

Significance Of The Auction

Numbers attest to the volume of business transacted at the auction. An average of 160 horses come through the auction per week, along with 1,000 slaughter hogs, 400 dairy cows, heifers, and bulls, 375 feeder pigs, 1,200 sheep, 1,400 goats, 1,400 beef cattle, and 900 calves.

Ron Ranck has been around sale barns since 1976, when he sorted cattle at Vintage Sales Stables. Later, in 1991, he began working in the ring at New Holland Sales Stables. He is also a partner in B & R Cattle Co., a feeder cattle business.

As a ring man he gives the auctioneer the starting price for the cattle entering the ring. "I evaluate what the cattle are worth and start a few cents below what I think they will bring to get some activity," he said.

According to Ranck, auction centers are integral to setting a competitive market.

"If you do not have your market anymore, direct trade will not be the same. An auction creates a comparison for farmers who are sending cattle to the packers. They have the option, if they feel they are not getting a fair bid from the packer, that they can still send to the auction. There are places in the country where that liberty has been eliminated by closed livestock markets.

"Sale barns establish the market and show producers what their cattle are worth."

As for the future of New Holland Sales, Ranck believes that the business is well-positioned "as long as the small- to midsize packers stay in business."

The auction is a hub for the kosher markets in cities — namely New York City, Baltimore, Boston, and Philadelphia. Buyers seeking high Choice and Prime cattle go to the sale barn to purchase animals for the kosher trade. Quality cattle also are purchased for export to Japan.

The supply of horses for the auction traditionally comes from western and southern states. The horses used to be unloaded from the railroad directly into the sale barn.

Show sales go back a long way in sales stables history. Aaron Kolb had the grand champion at the 1948 show sale. Norman Kolb, at 16 years old, is holding the winning cow.

MidAtlantic Farm Credit Reports To Stockholders

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Stockholders attending one of MidAtlantic Farm Credit's annual meetings conducted at several sites recently discovered something is wrong and something is right in rural America.

The "right" is the profitable returns the organization was able to provide to owner-members this past year.

The "wrong" is the mandated environmental laws forcing generations of farm families off the land.

Keynote speaker Bruce Vincent, a third generation logger from Montana, said that loggers, miners, and farmers are losing their ability to manage natural resources because of environmentalists manipulating the court system.

Congress is listening to movie stars and basing public policy not on reality but on perception of reality. Environmentalists want to create a perfect world and view the enemy as man and capitalism.

Growing up, Vincent believed loggers were stewards of the forest. When he went to college, he found out he was considered a tree murderer.

These conflicting viewpoints develop because most of the nation are enjoying an incredible amount of leisure time and money to vacation in rural areas. They want to keep pristine forests and countrysides. Consequently, they go back to their legislators and pass laws without understanding the effect of their decisions on nature.

In the case of Montana loggers, environmentalists wanted to increase the remnant population of grisley bears to native levels. Vincent told how scholars and environmentalists proposed to try embryo transplants between black bears and grisleys. Local residents realize that these two breeds are eternal enemies and the foolishness of the plan. They also realized the danger this entailed to local families and children, but they were told their advice wasn't requested.

Environmentalists proposed tying bells on children when they went out to play to keep bears from attacking the children. Of course, a few bad bears would eat the children, environmentalists admitted, but if bells were discovered in bear "poop," these bears would be dealt with.

"There is a common cry for common sense," Vincent said of the frustration in dealing with the reasoning of many environmentalists.

Environmentalists passed laws to prevent further logging in the area, which resulted in too many trees. A severe thunderstorm started 165 fires in one night and seven million acres of forest burned in two days. This was the result of loggers not being allowed to manage the forest.

Environmentalists said they would rather see the forest burned than managed by man. When Vincent spoke out against them, his equipment was blown up.

Cutting out logging livelihoods resulted in people without jobs and a severely depressed local economy. Environmentalists proposed that the area should become a tourist mecca. To support the hospitals and schools in the area, one million tourists would be needed annually — an impossibility.

Charolais GeneNet Establishes Marketing Grid With ConAgra

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Commercial cattlemen who produce high-quality cattle need to be paid for them. That is why the American-International Charolais Association (AICA) and Charolais GeneNet are proud to announce the first Charolais-influenced value-based marketing system.

Exclusively, the Charolais GeneNet has negotiated one of the very top grid carcass merit formulas in the beef industry today from ConAgra Beef Company, says Ken Conway, Hays, Kan., President of Angus GeneNet and Charolais GeneNet. This exclusive marketing grid, is one of the first to offer an upper two-thirds Choice premium for non-black hided cattle. However, the cattle must meet the 50 percent Charolais requirement.

"For years, Charolais cattle have proven that they are extremely efficient and they possess the carcass traits that the industry is looking for," said Scott Farmer, AICA director of commercial activities. "With the introduction of the Charolais GeneNet, commercial cattlemen now have another marketing opportunity to take advantage of the high-quality cattle they have been producing."

The Charolais GeneNet was designed with the idea of developing vertical cooperation between all segments of the beef industry. As producers utilize Charolais GeneNet, it will create a working relationship with an open flow of communication, as well as disseminate information between the commercial cow-calf producer, the Charolais seedstock producer, the feedlot industry, and the packer, ConAgra.

In addition to opening the communication flow between the segments, producers will receive valuable selection and management information as well as marketing recommendations for future calf crops. Individual carcass and feedlot information will also be obtained. Once producers receive the information, Charolais GeneNet representatives will be available to analyze the information and discuss the results with cattlemen.

For cattlemen who aren't interested in retaining ownership through the feedlot stage of production, Charolais GeneNet offers yet another marketing option. For those commercial cattlemen interested in selling their feeder calves, an entry form can be completed and submitted to a number of certified feeders and feedlots. Once the form is submitted, feeders can contact the producer directly to purchase, partner or custom feed the calves.

Cattlemen who are interested in participating in this innovative marketing opportunity should contact Ken Conway at (785) 628-3004 or send an e-mail to him at genenet@ruraltel.net. For more information about the Charolais breed, contact the AICA office at (816) 464-5977 or via e-mail at charusa@sound.net.

Tagged Red Angus Cattle Hitting Carcass Targets

DENTON, Texas — The Red Angus Feeder Calf Certification Program (FCCP) realizes the power that alliances and partnerships can create.

The FCCP was designed to help each segment communicate, and efficiently produce a product that meets these consumer demands. Backed by a USDA process verified system for source and genetically identified cattle, the FCCP offers options for feeder or fed cattle that are "certified" as Red Angus.

A great deal of effort has been dedicated to making the FCCP a leader in this arena, and significant consideration has been given to selecting partners who share the same objectives, philosophies, and concerns.

With this goal in mind, Excel Corporation and the FCCP have partnered for close to three years. The emphasis is to provide producers and feeders an avenue to market Certified Red Angus cattle, get rewarded for value, and supply branded beef premium programs.

In January, the Red Angus Marketing Agreement that Excel offers for tagged Red Angus cattle was re-negotiated. This revision provides a considerable increase in carcass value over the base price when compared to the previous Red Angus Marketing Agreement. Further analysis also shows that it will do a better job pricing cattle when compared to other pricing mechanisms. This revised agreement offers:

- The same percent Choice target for all three plants (Ft. Morgan, CO; Dodge City, NE; and Schuyler, NE);
- A minimum Choice/Select spread to help producers and feeders receive the reward they deserve for finishing the cattle to the optimum end point;
- Several increased premium values for quality and cutability; and
- A negotiated base price, or the respective USDA area weighted average prices week prior to harvest.

Other purchasing options include Angus America, another prominent value-based pricing agreement that emphasizes premiums for quality cattle, or on a basis contract through the futures market. For producers who are not sure how their animals will perform at the carcass level, cattle can be purchased on a live cash basis or in the meat.

Please contact the Red Angus Association's Marketing Department for more information on how to be a part of this alliance.

CONDUCTING AN ON-FARM TEST

John Rowehl, CCA
Cumberland County Agent

Many farmers like to conduct tests of hybrids, varieties, crop protection chemicals, or other crop inputs on their own fields. Done correctly, this is a good thing to do. If not done the right way, results may be misleading.

The most important thing to keep in mind is that you want to remove as many confounding factors as possible from any test you do on your farm. A common mistake is making a comparison between one year and another or between one field and another with different soils, soil fertility, different crop history, etc.

Doing a side-by-side comparison is the best approach to take. This removes influences of time, planting and harvesting conditions, cropping history, and weather changes.

Try to use a field with soils as uniform as possible. But variations in soil type and soil fertility exist in even the best fields and must be taken into consideration. Anyone who has seen a yield map or had grid soil sampling has seen this.

There are two different approaches to dealing with this. One popular way, particularly in hybrid testing, is to use a multiple check system in which a "tester" hybrid is planted every third or fourth strip. This check is used to adjust the yields of the other hybrids to compensate for changes in the field.

The other way and preferred method of crop scientists is to replicate the treatments several times in the field. By not doing one of these things, there is a good chance that the results you see are due to the differences in the field rather than differences in the products themselves.

Look at the following example of two hybrids that were tested last year in an on farm test. The yields shown are from each replication. Look at any single replication and ask yourself what conclusion you would come to if only one side-by-side test had been done. Then look at another replication and ask yourself the same question.

	Bu/Ac
Hybrid	Rep 1	Rep 2	Rep 3
A	173	208	186
B	181	186	203

(The average of these two hybrids can be found at the end of this article).

In some areas, several farmers work together to do the same comparisons on several farms in the area. The advantage of this is that it reduces the number of replications needed on any one farm.

Make the width of each treatment as narrow as possible so that the variation in soil change is as small as possible. Likewise, keep the number of things you are trying to compare to a minimum for the same reason. Try to use a field that's at least several hundred feet long to help dilute the effects of extra good or poor spots in the field or from the effect of a planter or spreader not operating normally at the end or beginning of a field as it starts up.

An informational circular about conducting on farm tests is available from cooperative extension. If you are interested in doing a test of your own, you can always contact one of the agronomy agents to bounce some ideas off of us.

Hybrid A = 189 bushels per acre.

Hybrid B = 190 bushels per acre.

Ohio State Pathologist Improves Plant Pathogen Test

WOOSTER, Ohio — A test commonly used to detect the presence of a plant pathogen in the aster leafhopper has been improved to further differentiate insects that are likely to spread the pathogen from plant to plant from those insects that are just merely infected.

The aster leafhopper, an insect that feeds on such crops as lettuce, carrots and celery, is a vector for aster yellows phytoplasma, a pathogen that can cause severe economic losses of the crops, especially lettuce. Diseased plants turn yellow, are malformed and may bolt prematurely, making them unmarketable. Aster yellows phytoplasma, a cell wall-less bacterium that causes the aster yellows disease, cannot be cultured in the lab and is difficult to detect in the field.

Ohio State University plant pathologist Sally Miller said specifically identifying the reproductive status of the pathogen within the leafhopper may help predict seasonal epidemics leading to effective preventive methods of control. Miller works at the university's Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center in Wooster.

The most common method for detecting aster yellows phytoplasma involves a polymerase chain reaction assay (PCR) that amplifies specific fragments of phytoplasma DNA in the leafhopper. The test, though quick and highly effective, only detects the presence of the pathogen and does not differentiate between insects that are infected and those that are inoculative, or able to transmit the pathogen from plant to plant. Miller and OARDC graduate student J.H. Zhang developed a sucrose-feeding solution method preceding the PCR assay that screens for those differences.

"The PCR assay is good for detecting the pathogen. But the feeding solution method goes one step further in determining whether or not a leafhopper can transmit it to plants," said Miller. "From those results we can predict aster yellows epidemics and recommend to farmers certain preventive or control measures."

The idea behind the technique involves feeding infected leafhoppers a sucrose solution through a parafilm membrane. While feeding, leafhoppers with a high phytoplasma content will spit the pathogen into the solution. Leafhoppers that do not carry the phytoplasma, or those in which the phytoplasma's dormant period is not complete, do not return the pathogen to the feeding solution. The solution is then tested by PCR.

"From the test, we can estimate how many insects are inoculative and how many are only infected, and not yet inoculative," said Miller. The study conducted to determine the accuracy of the sucrose solution showed that the method could positively detect inoculative insects over 99 percent of the time.

The sucrose-feeding technique is part of a larger research project being conducted by OARDC scientists using simulation models and a geographic information system to map out aster leafhopper populations to track the spread of aster yellows throughout lettuce fields in northern Ohio.

Babcock Institute And World Dairy Expo To Offer Course For Spanish-Speaking Workers

MADISON, Wis. — Producers with Spanish speaking employees can take advantage of top-notch dairy herd management training for their employees as part of the fourth International Dairy Short Course held in conjunction with World Dairy Expo.

The Babcock Institute at the University of Wisconsin-Madison in partnership with World Dairy Expo coordinates this four-day program. The seminar is sponsored by Hoard's Dairyman en espanol.

Focusing on dairy herd management the program will take place Sept. 30 to Oct. 3 at the UW-Madison campus and the Madison Concourse Hotel. The short course precedes World Dairy Expo, which is Oct. 3-7, 2001 at the Alliant Energy Center in Madison, Wisconsin.

The International Dairy Short Course will be presented in English with concurrent Spanish language translations. This educational event is intended as an opportunity for international dairy producers, veterinarians and agribusiness professionals. It's also an opportunity for U.S. producers to offer their Spanish speaking employees focused training.

Seminar topics will cover the basics of nutrition, reproduction, management and silage preservation along with workshops on ration balancing, dairy cattle judging and milking machine performance including a robotics overview. There will also be tours to different types of dairy cattle operations.

Registration for this special program is $350 US dollars if submitted by July 10. The registration fee includes the opening reception on Sun., Sept. 30 and breakfast and lunch Mon., Oct. 1 through Wed., Oct. 3. The fee also includes transportation to the university campus and farm visits, educational materials and proceedings printed in English or Spanish. Hotel lodging costs are not included.

This Plant Is More Than A Bean

COLUMBUS, Ohio — If a soybean could talk, it would have a lot to say.

Soybeans can't talk, but visitors can "see" what one would say at the "Soybean — Food of the Future" exhibit at Ohio State University's Bio-Hio 2001 open house, May 10-12, on the Columbus campus of the College of Food, Agricultural, and Biological Sciences.

The exhibit will show a larger-than-life picture of a soybean with word bubbles pointing out how OSU scientists have improved the plant, said Tomasz Przepiorkowksi, a post-doctoral researcher in OSU's soybean breeding program. "Basically, the plant will talk for itself," he said.

OSU research, under the direction of plant breeder Steve St. Martin, is developing a healthier plant from bottom to top, Przepiorkowski said. For example:

- Roots are attacked by soybean cyst nematode. Research is developing a plant that is less attractive to the nematode.
- The stem is where Ohio's number one soybean disease — phytophthora — shows its symptoms. OSU's continued research is developing resistant varieties.
- Leaves are the munching grounds for the Mexican bean leaf beetle. OSU is doing research to develop soybeans resistant to this defoliating bug.

Not only is OSU developing healthy soybeans, but also soybeans are healthy for people. Visitors will receive soybean seeds for home planting, with a recipe for making a nutritious snack, Przepiorkowski said.

"Soybeans can be a great appetizer, great snack and are very healthy for you," Przepiorkowski said. "Last year for two or three weeks, liked these snacks so much, I made them every day. They have a nutty taste."

Przepiorkowski said home gardeners can plant the seeds by mid-May and use cultivation practices similar for green beans. By mid-August, the pods should be ready for picking and cooking for treats.

The seeds were developed out of OSU's food-grade soybean program to give farmers export access to the Japanese tofu market, Przepiorkowski said. Cargo containers that supply Japanese manufacturing plants in Ohio are reloaded with the soybeans for the trip back to Japan.

However, most of Ohio's soybeans are raised for the generic commodity markets, where they are pressed for oil used in cooking. The meal by-product is used as a livestock feed.

OSU research has improved yields for farmers, as well as protein levels of the bean to enhance its value as a livestock feed, Przepiorkowski said. On the cooking oil front, research is attempting to increase oil shelf life by reducing attributes that make it rancid, he said.

The end result of the research is to make soybean production more profitable for Ohio farmers. "We are breeding soybeans for characteristics desired by Ohio farmers," Przepiorkowski said.

Parking for BioHio will be north of the Schottenstein Center off of Fred Taylor Drive in the Schottenstein Special Events Parking Lot. Access to the lot will be from Ackerman Road via State Route 315. Signs will be posted on SR 315, Ackerman Road and Lane Avenue to direct visitors to event parking. Buses will shuttle visitors to the event from the parking area.

Monday's "Level II" training was directed toward employees with one to three years experience, buiiding on last year's two training sessions. A possible Level III training may be offered in the future.

NRCS representatives and cooperative extension agents were instructors for the various classes.

Participants broke evenly in two groups in either an engineering or agronomy track for the week. In the engineering track, students identified soils, studied hydrology, and were educated on construction materials. After studying construction materials they would also went on a field trip to a concrete plant.

Soil health, the revised soil loss equation, pasture management, and plant identification were the topics for the agronomy track. Trips to farms to note pasture and intensive grazing system was also on the agenda.

The two tracks converged on Thursday and Friday for general conservation planning, as participants discussed how to plan a farm for economic viability and conservation of water and soil.

Many of the participants were returnees from last year's training.

Laurel Rush, Washington County Conservation District, is an agriculture conservation technician who attended the boot camp last year after only three weeks on the job.

"I couldn't wait to talk to come back and talk to everyone else to find out what their experiences and ideas were," said Rush. "That's where you learn the most. It helped define what I was going to do in my county."

Although much of the training was conducted outdoors, students in the engineering track studied soil close up even in the classroom.

Twenty-nine technicians spent a week at Fort Indiantown Gap to further their education about agronomy and engineering in agriculture.

In the classroom phase, students in the agronomy track learned that sand, silt, clay, bacteria, and fungi can be thought of as a living thing, according to Barry Frantz, resource conservationist for the NRCS.

Soil has a structure similar to a funnel, said Frantz, getting denser the further down into the earth.

The amount of tillage determines how much the cell structure at the top is maintained. Frantz also educated students on the importance of worms, as their tunnels act like direct conduits for rain to penetrate the soil.

In the engineering track, students learned about engineering equations used to determine moisture, density, and compaction levels for soil, which could be plotted on a curve based on the percentage of moisture to determine the maximum density.

Behavior characteristics of soil, such as plasticity and consistency, are also important to an engineering plan.

Lefever Joins Lancaster Farming

ick County, Maryland.

"My experience growing up was mostly about the production side of farming," Lefever said. "We worked hard to grow feed and milk the cows. The milk truck came every other day and we made a good living."

With the increasing need in today's economy for farmers to actively sell their own products, Lefever said he is impressed by the growing number of them finding innovative ways to produce and market while demonstrating a strong commitment to land and the environment.

From the home farm, Lefever went on to earn a bachelor's degree in biology from Goshen College and a certificate in secondary education from Millersville University.

After employment in several jobs related to his education as well as a stint in construction, Lefever returned to his farming roots in 1997 when he took the position on the Maryland farm.

"I've taken various jobs and enjoyed some of them," Lefever said. "But I discovered that part of me would always be lost without some kind of connection to agriculture."

In 1998, Lefever and his wife, Katrina, bought the 10-acre remains of a turn-of-the-century dairy farm near Hanover where they garden and raise Jacob sheep.

Lefever is grateful for his wife's own strong connection to the land and livestock.

"Whenever she has an opportunity, she's either planting something or working with the animals," he said.

In the years since college, Lefever has been steadily engaged in various kinds of writing, including correspondent work for the Hanover Evening Sun and the York Sunday News.

He credits his mother, Ruth, for influencing his interest in writing and reading. She has written articles for various church publications and magazines.

Acording to Andy Andrews, Lancaster Farming editor, Lefever's responsibities will center on dairy.

"Dave will be responsible for our key issues, including the June Dairy Issue, dairy special publications, government programs, and work on foraging around, the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council section," Andrews said.

"Of course, Dave will also contribute to other coverage areas as well."

For Lefever, writing has always been a tool for trying to make sense of complex situations and problems, whatever they might be.

"Along with farming, writing is one of the biggest challenges I can think of," he said. "You never get to the end of it."

Lefever said it's satisfying to have the opportunity to combine two central parts of his life — agriculture and writing — to earn a living.

"Some of the most creative and dedicated people I meet are farmers and others involved in agriculture," he said. "I look forward to meeting many more of them as part of my new job."

trayed logging as corporate greed or as weird, because the media continually interviewed outspoken but strange characters such as one who wore a T-shirt proclaiming "I eat owls." For the environmentalist viewpoint, the media selected a calm, likeable, parent saying all they want are clean water and air for their children.

News perspectives such as this fuels anti-logging attitudes. And the same tactics are used toward American agriculture, which is often pictured as using harmful chemicals and polluting the air with animal odors, Vincent said.

Farmers know these extremes aren't true, but the truth is distorted for those removed three generations from the farm.

Unfortunately, public policy is being based on ignorance, Vincent said. To get out of the mess we are in, we must fight the enemy — ignorance.

"Tell people the truth. We are the true environmentalists. We pay the price first if we do bad things to food and water. If we weren't doing an amazing job, people would be starving by now," Vincent said of agriculture.

Democracy works but it is not a spectator sport. Rural population is considered disposable and politically impotent because of its small numbers compared to urban areas. But, Vincent believes, if the 56 million people who live in rural areas band together, they can make a difference.

"The world is run by those who show up. Commit yourself to one hour a week to write a letter to the editor or go to the school to talk about who you are and what you do," Vincent said.

Youths are ready to hear from people with hope instead of hearing that they are inheriting a dying planet.

"If we aren't careful, we will become an importer of raw products and exporter of crazy environmental ideas," Vincent said.

At the meeting, J. Robert Frazee and Gerrie McGuire, chief financial officer, elaborated on the inner workings of Farm Credit.

This past year, $34 million were returned to member-owners despite incurring significant costs in consolidating five associations into one. The consolidation was planned in order to save taxes to make MidAtlantic stronger than ever.

"We could not have achieved successes without the support of the people we serve. Much has been done and much remains to be done, but commitment to serving member-owners remains a priority," Frazee said.

These are some of the goals that Farm Credit accomplished this past year:

- Diversified loan portfolio risk so that no industry represents more than 22 percent of portfolio.
- Strong capital base because they are the largest association in the AgFirst Farm Credit district and the eighth largest in the country.
- Improved efficiency by trimming $2.2 million in operating costs as a result of the consolidation.
- Expanded mortgage program to meet changing needs of members.
- Influence in communicating agriculture perspectives with legislators.

Members also voted on board member nominees. The results will be announced July 9.

Pa. Dairies Benefit From DMLA Program

check in the mail for $25,000.

Capp has been managing his own dairy operation for a year and a half, starting up again after his father retired from dairying three years ago.

Capp said he's already been putting the money to use on the farm.

"It helps you get caught after on bills (and) make improvements you don't have enough cash flow to do," he said.

Capp said that so far he's used the money to replace a skid loader, upgrade the free stall barn to make it more comfortable, and replace a few cows.

Payment rates under the new signup are about 65 cents per hundred weight (CWT) Total payment eligibility under the former program was limited to 26,000 CWT of milk per base year, but DMLA III raises that limit to 39,000 CWT.

At a limit of 39,000 CWT, all of the milk from a herd of about 175 cows or less with a typical rolling herd average would be eligible for payment under the new program. That includes most of the herds in southeastern Pennsylvania.

According to Jennifer Hershey, executive director of the FSA offices in Lebanon and Dauphin counties, a herd producing 15,000 CWT of milk per year —a typical level for the area— would be eligible for about $9,700 of relief.

Hershey said that 146 of the 320 dairy farms in Lebanon County signed up under the first two DMLA programs. As of April 16, another 42 have applied for the new payments.

The payments are intended to offset the 35 percent reduction in year 2000 milk prices from the previous 5-year average, Hershey said. She also noted that relief is important to farmers still recovering from the drought of 1999.

"A lot of farmers were still buying feed until last fall to make up for the drought," she said.

Hershey said that although many dairy producers in the past declined to accept government payments, more are doing so in order to remain viable.

"We're seeing many new producers. . . saying 'this is of economic significance to my program,'" she said.

Farmers interested in applying for the new funds should contact their county FSA office as soon as possible.

Gelbvieh Offers Commercial Marketing Opportunities

RAPID CITY, S.D. — The purpose of the American Gelbvieh Association Commercial Marketing Program is to help producers get the most profit possible for their Gelbvieh-influenced calves through different marketing channels. The American Gelbvieh Association continues to look for new ways to aggressively expand the services provided through the Commercial Marketing Program.

Gelbvieh Alliance Fed Cattle Value Based Grid

The Gelbvieh Alliance remains one of the most competitive value-based grids in the country. With the lowest fees in the industry, it allows cattle producers to take advantage of superior genetics through added premiums. It also allows producers to get important carcass information back on their cattle which plays a vital role in evaluating performance for future genetic and management changes.

Never before in the industry has knowing how your cattle perform been so important. The Gelbvieh Alliance marketed just under 56,000 head of cattle in the year 2000 alone and paid out more than $581,000 in premiums.

Free Semen And $30 Per Head Available For Carcass Test Herds

Collecting carcass data remains a top priority for members of the American Gelbvieh Association. The Commercial Marketing Program offers commercial producers the opportunity to use their herds as test herds for the Sire Testing Program.

In exchange for using artificial insemination and retaining ownership, the program allows producers to get free semen from some of the most powerful Gelbvieh sires in the breed while paying them $30 per head for every steer or heifer from which carcass information is collected. This is a great way for commercial cattlemen to incorporate Gelbvieh genetics into their cowherd and get paid to do it.

Special Gelbvieh Feeder Calf Sales

The American Gelbvieh Association works with auction barns across the country to jointly add value to Gelbvieh-cross calves. The auction barn provides a competitive environment to establish the true value of premium Gelbvieh-cross calves. The special sales are promoted heavily by both the American Gelbvieh Association and the auction barn.

Pooling top quality Gelbvieh-cross calves together and offering them on one day attracts a larger number of potential buyers and creates more competitive bidding in the sale ring. If there is not a special sale in your area, the Gelbvieh Association will gladly work with you to schedule one if there are enough Gelbvieh-cross calves available. Typically, at least 500 calves are needed for a successful special feeder calf sale.

Feeder Fax Listing Service

Many feedyards across the country have recognized the value of Gelbvieh-cross calves in the feedyard and on the rail. As value-based marketing grows and more cattle are sold on a grid formula, the demand for Gelbvieh-cross calves will continue to grow.

The Commercial Marketing Program continues to offer the feeder fax listing service as a method of exposing your cattle to feedyards and order buyers across the country. The service is simple and free of charge. Simply call the AGA and request a listing form that provides all the descriptive information on the cattle (number of head, sex, weight, breed type, vaccination program, etc).

The information on this form is compiled and sent by fax to more than 100 feeders and order buyers who may have an interest in buying your calves. No minimum number of head is required to participate. However, a truckload (80 to 100 head) is usually needed to take full advantage of the program. Contact the AGA for additional information or to list your Gelbvieh-cross feeder calves.

Replacement Females For Sale

Many people have recognized the value of Gelbvieh-cross females. Gelbvieh-cross replacement heifers, bred heifers, and cows are in demand. The AGA maintains a current listing of cattlemen interested in selling or buying Gelbvieh-cross females.

The list describes groups of cattle for sale or describes cattle that someone is interested in buying. In order to list females for sale, simply call the AGA with descriptive information about the cattle. If you are interested in buying, simply call the AGA with information on the type of females you want and where you are looking to purchase them.

This information is compiled into a listing, which is available to the buyers and sellers. It attempts to match buyer with seller, and vice versa. Contact the AGA office for a current listing of people interested in buying or selling commercial females.

Market Gelbvieh-Cross Calves Over The Internet

In the fall of 2000, the American Gelbvieh Association added an option to sell cattle on the Internet through eMerge's innovative Cattleinfonet interactive marketplace.

This gives producers the opportunity to list cattle for sale via the Internet and puts their cattle in front of an audience representing over 150 feedyards that jointly purchase more than 50 percent of the feeder calves in the United States. Listing your calves over the Internet is a way to add exposure to a broader audience of potential buyers.

Registration Open For Information Agriculture Conference Aug. 7-9

NORCROSS, Ga. — The Information Agriculture Conference series will continue with InfoAg 2001 scheduled for Aug. 7, 8 and 9. Organized by the Potash and Phosphate Institute (PPI), Potash and Phosphate Institute of Canada (PPIC), and the Foundation for Agronomic Research (FAR), InfoAg 2001 will take place at the Adam's Mark Hotel at the Indianapolis Airport in central Indiana.

"The Information Agriculture conference has become a fixture for some key audiences who see the essential link between modern, progressive agriculture and the need to harness the power of information management," notes Dr. Paul E. Fixen, PPI Senior Vice President. "Some important cooperators will be partnering with us in 2001. Meister Publishing (Farm Chemicals and CyberDealer magazines) will handle the CyberDealer sessions during the conference. Prairie Farmer magazine of the Farm Progress Companies group will also be working with us to develop farmer-oriented sessions."

The conference is supported in part through a grant from the USDA-CSREES Initiative for Future Agriculture and Food Systems (IFAFS) program.

Previous Information Agriculture conferences in 1995, 1996, 1997, and 1999 were highly successful in bringing together leaders and early adopters of site-specific management practices and other important developments. Attendees represent a cross section of people in agriculture and related work, including farmers, fertilizer dealers, consultants, Certified Crop Advisers (CCAs), farm managers, government agency personnel, university researchers, teachers, Extension specialists, and international participants.

Dr. Harold F. Reetz, PPI Midwest Director, serves as conference planning coordinator. Program features are being planned in several major components: Economics/Farm Management; Data Analysis/Tools; Site-Specific Nutrient Management; and Communications/Environment. As with previous Information Agriculture Conferences, an exhibit area will also be open to attendees. Exhibitor fees are $500 per booth, with a maximum of two spaces per company or organization.

The registration fee for InfoAg 2001 is $350 per person if received by July 15, but it increases to $450 thereafter.

More details of the program and exhibitor information will be available soon. For hotel accommodations, individuals should contact Adam's Mark (Airport) at (317) 248-2481; the conference rate for rooms is $101 per night.

Access current information and updates about the conference at www.ppi-farorg/infoag, call (605) 692-6280, or fax (605) 697-7149.

Penn State Limits Access To Livestock Research Farms

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — As a precautionary measure to protect against foot and mouth and other contagious foreign animal diseases, Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences has implemented a new biosecurity policy for all farm units housing livestock. Effective immediately, visits to university dairy, beef, swine, sheep, deer and equine facilities will be by appointment only.

All entrances to the restricted facilities will be posted. Appointments to visit the facilities may be requested by contacting the College of Agricultural Sciences at (814) 865-1362 or by sending an e-mail to coas-visits@lists.psu.edu.

Managers of the restricted farm units will interview potential visitors to determine the purpose of the visit. They also will request information to determine whether any of the visitors may have been in direct or indirect contact with any traveler from a country with confirmed cases of foot and mouth or other contagious foreign animal diseases.

Other steps, including protective clothing and restrictions on direct contact with animals will be implemented as appropriate for visitors who are cleared. All affected farm unit employees have been trained in the biosecurity protocols for handling and care of livestock.

This policy will be in effect until further notice. New guidelines will be issued if and when conditions warrant.

More information on foot and mouth disease is available at the College of Agricultural Sciences foot and mouth disease information center on the Web at http://fmd.cas.psu.edu.

Grange Announces Major Renewal Effort, Initiates 'Action Granges'

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Grange Executive Committee recently announced that it would pursue a major development initiative aimed at creating a relevant, preeminent growing organization. The announcement was made after a year long study by a Strategic Planning Task Force made up of a select group of members working with a consultant in organizational change.

Under the provisions of these recommendations, 115 local community Granges in 23 states will become Action Granges and assume the leadership of a strategic renewal process lasting up to three years. Action Granges will identify, test and approve programs designed to create a growing, relevant, preeminent family organization.

The National Grange Strategic Planning Task Force announced the selection after a four-month review of potential Action Grange participants. Changes in the National Grange organization and its headquarters operations in Washington are also under way and will be announced later.

According to Kermit Richardson, National Master, "We have known for some time now that the Grange needed to make some major and fundamental changes at every level of the organization to survive as a leading, national organization. The changing make up of American Society, particularly in the areas of farming and agriculture — which were our roots — meant that we were overdue for a look at the real relevance of our organization and its appeal to 21st century members. We discovered, through the efforts of the Task Force, that we needed to change in some very fundamental ways or we would not survive. These changes were outlined to the Executive Committee in the fall of 2000.

"The decision to create and support Action Granges to create programs at the local level has been supported by a strategic review of the National Grange and the consideration of significant change at this level as well. We believe the appointment and empowerment of these Action Granges represent a critical first step in the renewal of the Grange and have characterized this as a great experiment within one of the Nation's most respected organizations aimed at creating a new Grange that meets the needs of its 21st century members."

Richardson continued, "Over the next several years, we are going to establish programs that will work because they have been tested by our Action Granges. As soon as a program has passed this litmus test as workable in the community Grange, it will be made available to all Granges. We are going to develop programs and procedures that increase our relevance and appeal, eliminate all barriers to joining, improve all of our programs, solidify our financial and organizational capabilities and improve the quality of our leaders at every level."

The initial renewal effort will focus on developing leadership skills at every level of the Grange. In making its recommendations to the National Grange Executive Committee, the consultant and the Task Force concluded, "Leadership development must be the number one priority of the Grange and will the cornerstone of it's the renewal effort. Only when leaders at every level of the organization really understand that the future is their responsibility, will the Grange take those actions needed to secure its survival of the organization.

The Task Force noted that the declining membership in the Grange parallels declines in most organizations, but realized early on that the Grange's focus on the entire family and its involvement in the community through the local Grange, gave it a distinct advantage over other organizations. The Grange's legacy in supporting agriculture will not be lost, but will be expanded to support the needs of all Americans in rural and urban communities."

Under an agreement reached with the Executive Committee and with the approval of State Masters, Action Granges will be given significant freedom to experiment and try new ideas. This is not limited to new ways of attracting and retaining members. According to Position Papers produced by the Task Force and approved by the Executive Committee, Action Granges will be able to take whatever reasonable steps they need to increase the relevance and appeal of their local organization.

In all Action Granges, secrecy will be eliminated and meetings will be open to all. Action Granges will be encouraged to build and implement new programs that have broad appeal to the entire family, eliminate those that have not worked, improve their financial and organization structure, and improve the quality of the leadership of their community-centered organization.

Multi-State Small Farmer Exposition And Trade Show Coming Fall 2001

STROUDSBURG (Monroe Co.) — Rutgers University and Penn State University along with a committee of producers, agriculture industry representatives, trade associations, development and tourism organizations have developed and will be conducting the first NE Regional Small Farm and Rural Living Exposition and Trade Show this fall.

The event will be held Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 22 and 23, at the west End Fairgrounds, near Stroudsburg, in the foothills of the Poconos. This location is ideal, as it is convenient to reach via the Pennsylvania Turnpike and Interstate Route 80 from all directions.

The goal of the two day event is to provide a trade show of businesses, associations, agencies and others that service small farms and rural residents, and to conduct pertinent demonstrations, educational workshops and classes.

Sixteen hours of classes and workshop are planned. Classes will cover various small farm enterprises including Christmas Tree production, bees and honey production, boarding horses, forestry and dozens more. Over 25 hours of demonstrations are planned in the areas of animal agriculture, small farm equipment, crop production, horticulture, fencing, etc.

The Northeast Small Farm and Rural Living Exposition and Trade Show will provide attendees the opportunity to contact businesses and organizations that service the rural and small farm community and acquire knowledge and skills to improve their small farms and the quality of country life.

If you would like more information about the event, contact Greg Solt, Penn State Cooperative Extension, Gracedale Complex, Nazareth, PA 18064, (610) 746-1970, or visit the Website at www.smallfarmexpo.org.

N.Y. Ag Committee Chairman Lauds Budget For Commitment To Agriculture

ALBANY, N.Y. — Assembly Agriculture Committee Chairman, Bill Magee (D-Nelson) applauded the recent passage of the Assembly one-house budget resolution for its strong commitment to agriculture.

"Agriculture is still New York State's largest industry and the Assembly understands the importance of remaining committed to its stability and growth, otherwise the rural areas of our state will be decimated economically," Magee said.

The agriculture industry generates over $3.1 billion annually in direct economic output and at least double or triple that in indirect economic benefits with the farm and food industry employing over 425,000 people in this state. Currently, there are approximately 38,000 farms encompassing some 7.8 million acres of cropland, pasture and woodlands.

Magee noted that the Assembly has provided significant support for agricultural health and safety issues spurring the Governor to include the creation of 31 new positions at the Department of Agriculture and Markets in his budget for pet shop and food safety inspectors. Moreover, the Assembly includes enormous financial assistance for disease management programs, including:

- $300,000 for the Johnes Disease Program which will allow the Diagnostic Lab at Cornell University to perform tests for Johnes Disease as well as provide resources to assist farmers with eradicating this disease from their herd; and
- $150,000 for the Cattle Health Assurance Program which is an integrated disease prevention program that has as its three main goals: improving dairy herd health and productivity, assuring food safety and public health and promoting environmental stewardship;
- $200,000 for the Integrated Pest Management Program which will allow for the development of new, cost-effective and environmentally sound methods to protect crops, vegetables and fruits — with the main focus being a reduced reliance on pesticides.

"We are blessed in this state with one of the finest research institutions in the world in Cornell University and this money for cattle health maintenance and the IPM program is money that is well spent and will reap vast returns for our farmers," Magee commented.

Recognizing the need to assist with not only growing their product, but also with developing and selling them, the Assembly included an additional $865,000 to support research and development activities as well as Agri-Marketing programs across the state. These include:

- $315,000 for the New York Wine and Grape Foundation for the development of a "Slice of the Big Apple" marketing campaign aimed at increasing the exposure of New York State produced wines and other agricultural products to the culinary restaurant markets of New York City;
- $250,000 for the New York Apple Association to assist in increasing the competitive position for the apple industry in New York State by enhancing the marketing opportunities for New York apple growers while maintaining the strict standards that our apple growers must meet. This is becoming increasingly important as apples and apple juice are being imported from countries with dubious health and safety standards;
- $300,000 to support agricultural research and development activities at Cornell University's Geneva Experimental Station. This funding will allow the Experimental Station to remain on the forefront of providing research to the food industry in terms of enhancing food safety, working with small businesses to create different ethnic cuisines as well as methods to better produce and process fruits and vegetables.
- $1.3 million for the Grow NY Program which provides grants to farmers to assist them in developing new marketing opportunities, implementing new business techniques and other methods of maximizing profit, product and efficiency; and
- $1 million for an Agricultural Technology Initiative that will be developed at the State University Colleges of Agriculture and Technology to assist farmers with using and implementing high tech systems.

In terms of marketing, Magee pointed out that he has also introduced legislation that would allow beer wholesalers to begin selling New York produced wine. This bill would give beer wholesalers the incentive to really market New York wine to their customers and would increase the profile and profitability of the wine and grape industry in New York State. As well as developing legislation that would then create the state's first AgriDevelopment Zone which will be modeled after Empire Zones but aimed specifically at rural areas and agriculture in particular.

"These bills and budget proposals represent a multifaceted approach to assisting the agriculture industry that include not only tax breaks, but assistance with improving health and herd management, developing marketing proposals and niches and expanding and opening markets for their products. There is no doubt that New York farmers produce the highest quality product in the world, now we have to make a commitment to assist them in further developing and selling those products," Magee concluded.

DEP, Penn State Extension Team Up To Offer Composting Workshops, Free Compost Bins

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — On behalf of Gov. Tom Ridge, Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) Secretary James M. Seif recently announced that DEP and Penn State Cooperative Extension again are teaming up to offer composting workshops and free back yard composting bins to Pennsylvania.

"Composting is nature's own way of recycling — and it is an essential way to increase our recycling rate," Seif said. "We currently recycle 32.6 percent of all waste, and composting will help us reach Gov. Ridge's goal of 35 percent by 2003.

"We must continue to find more efficient and economical ways to recycle our resources if we are to become a truly sustainable society," said Bob Steele, Dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences at Penn State University. "We are committed to helping Pennsylvania's citizens meet these goals through our research and extension programs."

Penn State Cooperative Extension offices are holding workshops on back yard composting this spring. In Lackawanna County, the workshops will be held May 1, 3, and 8. Each person who preregisters for a workshop and attends will receive a free composting bin, as long as supplies last.

All of the workshops are handicapped accessible. If you need specific accommodations, each county extension office asks that you call in advance.

For more information about composting, you can telephone DEP's compost coordinator at (717) 787-7382, or visit DEP through the Pennsylvania Website at www.state.pa.us or directly at www.dep.state.pa.us (directLINK "composting"). Information on composting workshops in each county can be found at http://backyardcompost.cas.psu.edu.

Visit www.GreenWorks.tv to watch the video about how composting can recycle organic waste.

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Food and friendship appeal to people of all ages. The combination forms the basis for T.A.S.T.E., which stands for Taste and See — Thoughtful Expressions.

The newly-formed group, which meets the first Thursday of every month at 7 p.m. in Karen Mellinger's home, Landisville, invites new participants. No membership fee or minimum attendance are required.

T.A.S.T.E. is an opportunity to find new recipes, sample favorites, and take home the surplus to share with families and friends.

"I've always participated in cookie exchanges and thought that the common bond that forms in these exchanges would be nice to continue all year," Karen said.

Karen remembers the days her parents operated an upscale restaurant in Chicago. Her father was a chef who enjoyed trying a wide variety of ethnic foods. Her mother was in charge of planning seven-course meals. Karen has recollections of helping prepare stuffed mushrooms and other appetizers.

Seven years ago, Karen married Dick Mellinger, a Lancaster countian, and moved into the area, where she discovered that Pennsylvania Dutch cooking is less seasoned than most ethnic cuisine.

Karen waitressed for a wide variety of restaurants. But she prefers experimenting with baked goods and appetizers.

A subscriber to several food magazines, Karen found herself collecting more and more recipes. She thought a T.A.S.T.E. would give her the opportunity to put some of those recipes to use.

"Periodically, I'd like to have a new recipe night — where everyone brings something they've never made before."

May 3 will be the second meeting for T.A.S.T.E. "We're only in our formative stage. I'd like to get feedback from other participants to see what they'd interested in having the group grow into," Karen said.

Participants should bring something baked for exchange such as cookies, muffins, bars, breads, candies or appetizers.

"The first several meetings are sort of trial and error. Participants should probably bring about a three dozen minimum of cookies or candy, and increase in a dozen increments if desired," Karen said.

If surplus is left over, Karen said the group would "bless others" by giving the baked goods to public service agencies such as the police department, fire department, library, post office, and community projects.

"At this point, we won't do whole cakes or iced cookies, because they don't pack well," Karen said.

She'd love to find more recipes for casseroles that freeze well. "Perhaps we'll have a casserole exchange sometime. It's nice to have a casserole in the freezer to serve to unexpected company," Karen said.

"Something I would like to create in the future is a database of information on each participant. This database would reflect the interests of each person in the group. For instance, maybe several people would say they are interested in exchanging canned goods, looking for fondue recipes or vegetarian

(Turn to Page B3)

Karen Mellinger displays some of the cookies that participants brought to exchange during the first meeting of T.A.S.T.E. The group offers opportunities to sample new recipes, share the surplus with family, friends, coworkers, and community, and form new friendships.

Denise Hess sets the table with blue willow china, stemware, and gold-colored napkins in preparation for a gourmet feast. Her husband Mike restored the antique brass candelabrum with polished prisms, which he found in Vermont. The Hesses will serve a gourmet feast to the highest bidder on the date of choice.

Five-year-old Elizabeth Hess steals a moment of play with this handcrafted doll bed that is available through a silent auction. Elizabeth's dad, Mike, made the four-poster bed to fit an 18-inch doll, and her mother, Denise, stitched the bedding set and coverlet. Seamstresses stitched more than 65 outfits to fit 18-inch dolls. These outfits and some other items will be priced for purchase rather than auctioned during the two-day benefit auction (May 11-12) at the Kraybill Mennonite School, 598 Kraybill Church Road, Mount Joy. For more information, call the school at (717) 653-5236 or visit its website at kraybillms.mennonite.net.

Gourmet Feast, Doll Bed Will Go To Highest Bidder

LOU ANN GOOD

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — For those who can't cook, don't have time, or simply want to enjoy a leisurely five-course dinner without the time-consuming preparation, Denise Hess has the solution.

She will prepare and serve a gourmet feast in her home for eight guests of your choice.

This unique service will go to the highest bidder at Kraybill Mennonite School's 24th annual benefit auction, May 12.

Patrons at the school try to incorporate their talents into donating items for the benefit auction. For Denise, cooking and entertaining is her forte.

Her husband Mike, owner of the Furniture Doctor, excels in furniture making. Mike handcrafted a doll poster bed in the Chippendale style that will placed on silent auction to go to the highest bidder May 12 at 2 p.m.

Denise sewed a coverlet and bedding set for the bed that fits an 18-inch doll. In addition, Denise and a friend cut out 65 outfits to fit 18-inch dolls. Mothers of students at the school sewed the outfits. These will be priced and available to buy during the auction days, May 11-12.

Denise said that her love for cooking was inherited from her mother and grandmother — wonderful cooks. When Denise was in junior high school, she was responsible for preparing family suppers because her mother worked away from home.

"My brother gave me appreciation for foods from beyond Lancaster County," Denise said. "He liked to cook unusual things and we'd eat it."

Today, Denise prefers preparing gourmet dishes, especially desserts. For the dinner that will be offered for bid, the menu includes the following:

Asparagus Soup and Rolls
Mandarin Orange Salad
Leg of Lamb/Roast Beef
Buttered/Parslied Red Potatoes
Vegetable Medley (carrots, snowpeas, yellow squash)
Chocolate Expresso Fudge Cake

"I'd love to be a pastry chef," Denise said. "I like to prepare desserts that require several days of preparation."

She gets plenty of practice by preparing desserts for friends and church fundraisers. In fact, for a church fundraiser, she offered a dessert of the month. The highest bidder gets a dessert each month on a date compatible with the recipient and Denise.

All this cooking requires lots of time and expense, but Denise said that she and her husband believe in the philosophy that a three-cord strand cannot easily be broken. The three-cord strand, she said, refers to school, church, and home.

The Hesses apply this belief to laying a firm foundation of training for children, Brad, 8, and Elizabeth, 5.

When the school, church, and home teaches the same (morals and beliefs), children are grounded and strongly influenced to follow their childhood teachings rather than compromise from peer and media influence, Denise said.

For that reason, the Hesses believe a sacrifice of their time, money, and talents is well worth it.

dishes.

"Once this information is entered into the database it could easily be compiled so that if someone asks for a list of others interested in a particular area I could provide them with that information and they could possibly do an exchange of their own apart from our regular meetings," Karen said.

She also foresees have quarterly potluck dinners, possibly with families of participants.

In addition to sharing food and recipes, Karen sees these times as strengthening friendships through meeting new friends and acquaintances. From a Christian background, Karen would like people to experience the scripture on which the name T.A.S.T.E. was derived: "Taste and see that the Lord is good."

Karen has a bit of experience working with groups and food. For the last several years she has worked on the steering committee for Lancaster County Fest, conducted Labor Day Sunday. The Fest is a joint effort of several churches that host a community fest at a local park. About 5,000 people attend.

"The enjoyment of all working together spurred the idea to find more things to do with a group throughout the year," Karen said.

Participants do not need to promise ahead of time what they plan to bring, but call (717) 898-2239 so that Karen will know how to plan for seating.

Here is a cookie recipe submitted by Mim Ginder, who attended the first T.A.S.T.E. gathering.

Oatmeal Jumble Bars

3 cups oatmeal, uncooked
1½ cups all-purpose flour
1 cup brown sugar
1 cup butter, melted
¾ teaspoon salt (optional)
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 (10 to 12 oz.) jar fruit preserves

Heat oven to 400 degrees. Grease a 9x13-inch pan. Combine all ingredients except the preserves. Mix well. Reserve 1 cup oat mixture. Press remaining mixture onto bottom of prepared pan. Spread preserves evenly over base to within half-inch of edge of pan. Sprinkle with reserved oats mixture. Bake 25 to 30 minutes or until golden brown. Cool completely. Cut into 2x1½-inch bars. Makes 32 bars. Store in tightly covered container.

Ida's Notebook

by Ida Risser

By April, you would think that all the snow of winter would be gone. But, I keep hearing stories of snow in Maine and Vermont. Our daughter and her family will be moving to Maine next month. When they were there to buy a house, there was several feet of snow on the ground.

And, a nephew in Vermont was snowed in for several days as he lives off the beaten path. I thought his worry might be food, but his mother said that it was heat and whether the pile of wood would last. He dug a path for his dog to get outdoors.

Here in Lancaster County, my peas are just now coming up in our garden. I planted four kinds and hope for a good harvest. Most of the seed I save from year to year. Some of our seed is sold by Landis Valley Museum under their Heirloom Seed Project as Risser Sickle Pea. One kind is quite similar to the Sugar Snap pea, while the other is quite early and can be harvested the end of May.

I've bought some more used wool material and finally finished another braided rug. This one has many colors and was not carefully planned. Let's hope someone will find it attractive. Different people like different colors. One grandchild picked a green rug while another likes pink.

One of our grandsons just returned from a 10 day trip to Europe. He plays the cello and was in Austria, Switzerland, France, and Germany. Not too many 14-year-old boys have this opportunity. He started the trip by forgetting his jacket, so he phoned his father from the airport, which was an hour from his home. He was told to buy one on his trip as a remembrance of the journey.

For consumers with a fear of baking from scratch, Land O'Lakes now offers a basic baking lesson on its Website, www.landolakes.com.

The current lesson tackles brownies — one of the most popular baked treats in America. Consumers can choose to learn to bake their favorite kind of brownie — chewy, fudgy or cakey. The site provides step-by-step instructions and photos from preparing the pan to testing for doneness. The lesson will change periodically. Next up: how to roll out dough.

Consuming Thoughts

Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.

Most people know that they can't change their basic body structure, but, whatever your body type, you can be fit and not fat! To be fit is to feel good and move well while maintaining a desirable weight. Some people who weigh more than the height-weight chart indicate maybe fit because their excess weight is in muscle, not fat. Overweight is a problem only if the extra calories are in fat.

To see if you are "fat," rather than "fit," answer these questions:

- Are you wider at the waist than at your chest?
- Does your middle interfere with sight of your toes?
- If you pinch a fold of skin from the back of your upper arm, is it more than an inch thick?

If you answered yes to these questions, it is time to get "fit."

Obesity is harmful to your health and may shorten your life. It increases risk of high blood pressure, diabetes, heart disease and many other medical problems. Some overweight people may be at greater risk than others. For example, recent research shows that people who tend to have their fat concentrated in the waist and abdomen rather than the thighs and buttocks may be more prone to the illnesses that often go along with obesity.

The best approach to becoming fit is to decrease calories and increase physical activity. Exercise burns calories and helps make you fit. Exercise also relieves tension, which often leads to overeating.

You don't have to be an athlete to engage in physical activity. There are lots of little ways to burn calories during your daily routine. Walk or bicycle instead of drive, use the stairs instead of the elevator, stand rather than sit. Bend, stoop, stretch, squat, reach, move, lift, and carry are all extra actions that add up to burned calories.

The number of calories burned depends on the degree of the activity (running burns more than walking), length of the activity (the longer the activity continues, the more calories burned), and your weight (a heavier person uses more energy than a lighter person for the same activity). A leisurely walk burns more than twice as many calories as standing quietly. A brisk walk burns over three times as many. Increasing your regular activity by walking briskly for just half an hour each day can result in 17 pounds of body fat lost per year, assuming that you have not increased your level of calories from food!

Perhaps you might take several one-minute stretch breaks during the day, take a walk at lunchtime or after work or attend an aerobics or slimnastics class. Develop a home exercise program for yourself or set up a daily routine of walking, bicycling or jogging or simply put more vigor into everyday activities.

The important thing is to see how to best fit fitness into your schedule and then take action! Start with the activities that are easiest for you or appeal to you most. So the bottom line is continue to make small steady changes and make them permanent.

Alfalfa Sprouts Concern

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Almost any food can give you food poisoning, and alfalfa sprouts are no exception. In 1999, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention issued an advisory about all sorts of sprouts for people who are at high risk from food-borne disease — children under 5 years old, the elderly and those with weak immune systems. There's simply no way currently to assure safety of sprouts.

The problem stems from the warm, humid conditions necessary for seeds to grow into sprouts — they're exactly the conditions enjoyed by many types of bacteria, including E. coli O157:H7 and salmonella. The fact that there's so much surface area on sprouts is also conducive to bacteria growth. Unfortunately, rinsing sprouts under running water doesn't always get rid of bacteria. And this can happen with any kind of sprout — bean, clover, alfalfa, cress, soy, mustard, broccoli or radish. In 1996, 10,000 people became ill in an E. coli outbreak in Japan, traced to white radish sprouts.

Although sprouts, like other foods, can be contaminated at any point in production and distribution, it appears the problem often lies in the seeds themselves. Researchers even tried soaking alfalfa seeds in a chlorine bleach solution before sprouting them. While that reduced potential problems, it didn't eliminate them.

Still, almost any food that's not properly handled or cooked poses some risk. You just have to take that into account. And sprouts can be a nutritious part of a salad or sandwich, offering a bit of protein, fiber, vitamin C, folate and iron to your diet. Larger sprouts used in stir-fries are safe as long as they're cooked thoroughly. Just make sure you let them simmer for a few minutes in the hot pan or wok before serving.

Even though you can't control what processors or distributors do, food-safety experts emphasize the importance of proper food-safety practices in the home to reduce food-borne illness. Wash your hands thoroughly and often — before preparing food and after combing your hair, petting animals, touching raw meat or fish, and especially after changing diapers or using the toilet. Use hot water and wash for at least 20 seconds, air drying or using a clean towel or paper towel to dry.

Scams

It's that time of year when many homeowners turn their thoughts to fix up and repair jobs around the home and are more than willing to let someone else help for a great price.

I heard a story this week about a homeowner who had repairmen stop at his home and offer to repair the lightening protection system. The supposed repairmen indicated that they could see it was damaged from lightening and proceeded to do some work on the spot up on the roof.

After lots of pounding, the work was completed. The consumer paid, and the repairmen were off. It wasn't until the consumer realized maybe he should have gotten a receipt that the true story started to unfold. A reputable lightening protection system company who the person thought had done the work was contacted and the consumer asked for a receipt. When the company indicated they did not do any recent work for the individual it was clear what had happened. The company paid a visit to the consumer, checked the bogus work done, and found it was not done according to code, but the repairmen were long gone.

So you say, oh that would never happen to me?

Well, perhaps you are real smart and always on top of things, but think about your loved ones, especially the elderly who can't do many repair jobs for themselves and are thrilled when someone offers to do it immediately.

Of course the elderly want to pay their bills right away!

When we think of fraud, many of us immediately think about the telephone. Have you ever stopped to think it might be someone knocking at your door? Fraud is a purposeful deception practiced in order to get an unfair or unlawful advantage where a seller intentionally misleads the buyer. Fraud occurs when a knowing deception causes a consumer to enter into a transaction and by doing so, suffers a financial loss.

If you are approached with an offer by someone to do repair work, do your homework up front. Ask the person or company for a written quote that includes their name, address, telephone number, and a description of the work to be done. Ask lots of questions. Ask for local references that include a telephone number so you can truly call the reference before the work is done. Never allow someone to do the work the same day. If they do the work later make sure you get a receipt with the previously mentioned information.

If you are approached by anyone who has a deal too good to be true, take action by alerting authorities. You could prevent some unsuspecting consumer from losing money in a fraudulent scheme. Get as much identifying information (such as name, mailing address, and telephone number) as you can from the con artist before telling them that you are not interested in what they are selling. When a number of complaints or reports are received from a given area, authorities are likely to take enforcement action and issue consumer alerts by the media to warn others.

Beef Council Partners With Women's Nutrition Solutions

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — The National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA), the Council for Women's Nutrition Solutions (CWNS), and the Pennsylvania Beef Council (PBC) joined forces in Philadelphia on March 31 for a roundtable on Speaking of Women's Health (SWH).

SWH conducts health seminars for women in cities throughout the country. The purpose is to share "everyday solution" messages with women.

The stress/balance-themed roundtable brought together about 600 women including health professionals, consumers, and media to learn more about all aspects of health. Events included a roundtable breakfast featuring presentations about research, insights, and recommendations in women's health.

Susan Calvert Finn, Ph.D., R.D., F.A.D.A., moderated the sessions with presentations by Jeanne Goldberg, Ph.D., R.D., and Peggy Elam, Ph.D. All attendees enjoyed a beef-sponsored luncheon with beef nutrition messages.

The afternoon keynote section highlighting the top five "power foods," including beef, featured CWNS member Dayle Hayes, M.S., R.D., as the keynote speaker, which received rave reviews from the audience and a standing ovation.

The trade show booth exhibit showcasing CWNS and beef nutrition handouts was a great success with significant interest and traffic by SWH attendees. To further the beef nutrition message, Mary K. Young, M.S., R.D., executive director of nutrition, participated in an extensive interview with "Prevention" magazine and the "Philadelphia Inquirer."

The Speaking of Women's Health event is just one of many projects funded by Pennsylvania's beef, dairy and veal producers through the National Beef Checkoff. For more information on the beef checkoff, or to learn more about the CWNS program, call the Pennsylvania Beef Council office at (717) 939-7000.

Attendees at a meeting of The Council for Women's Nutrition Solutions (CWNS). Members of the all-women advisory board of doctors, dietitians and nutrition scientists, presented the latest information, research and professional advice on such topics as: how to maintain weight, eat right, increase energy and decease stress. CWNS members deliver their messages to women, health professionals and media in various ways, including around the country at meetings such as these and through educational resources, such as the CWNS Professional Guide to Women's Everyday Solutions. In partnership with the National Cattlemen's Beef Association and Cattlemen's Beef Board, CWNS members champion beef as one of the important solutions for women on the go.

Philadelphia Consumers Taste Microwaveable Beef: Give Rave Reviews

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — More than 17,000 consumers sampled the new microwaveable seven-minute pot roast during The Book and The Cook Fair at the Philadelphia Convention Center, March 30-April 1.

The weekend culinary extravaganza featured celebrity chefs from across the country, cooking demonstrations, and an opportunity for organizations to hand out sample products to those in attendance.

At the PA Beef Council booth, the pot roast received rave reviews from the crowds, with many people commenting they couldn't believe a pre-cooked microwaveable beef product was so tender and juicy. The Book & The Cook Fair visitors also received beef and veal recipes, nutrition facts, and money-saving coupons for their next purchase of either Harris Ranch or RMH Foods Quick-N-Easy (heat-and-serve microwaveable beef products).

The Harris Ranch and Quick-N-Easy pot roast are just two new products in the emerging convenience beef category at local grocers' meat cases. The products come pre-packaged in their own easy-to-use microwaveable tray, which virtually eliminates clean-up. Paired with side dishes such as mashed potatoes and country vegetables, consumers can enjoy a great tasting, traditional meal in a matter of minutes.

Lawn Care Services

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Spring is here, and while many Pennsylvanians are attacking their lawns and gardens with mulchers and spreaders, others, however, prefer to contract with a lawn-care service to maintain their lawns.

Because consumers may be required to sign lengthy and expensive contracts for these services, it's important to know what to look for in order to choose the best service for your lawn care needs.

Looking for Services:

- Talk with neighbors who have had work done in the past. Find out who they recommend and why.
- Shop around. Get estimates from several companies. Which services are included in the price?
- Find out if the companies offer a free lawn analysis. Since every lawn is different, you want to make sure you are getting a customized service.
- Once you decide on a company, check to see if they have liability insurance. What happens if an accident occurs while working on your lawn?

Using a Pesticide:

- Get in writing, the name of any pesticides used and read the Environmental Protection Agency label carefully.
- Ask if there are any less harmful compounds or alternatives that can be used instead of the pesticide and at what price.
- Is there any special training required for the employee applying the chemicals?
- Check to see if the company will post a notice alerting the neighborhood to the fact that pesticides were used.
- Ask about the harmful characteristics of the chemicals and what precautions to take, especially concerning young children, pregnant women, the elderly and pets.

Signing the Contract:

- Get everything in writing and read the contract carefully before signing anything. Are there any extra charges that you did not agree to?
- Is the company's work guaranteed? If so, get that in writing as well.
- Check for the "Notice of Cancellation" or "Right of Decision" in the contract. According to Pennsylvania law, you have three days to cancel a contract for services (over $25) entered into at your home.

The Attorney General's Bureau of Consumer Protection is here to help. If you need more information, visit the Website at www.attorneygeneral.gov or call the toll-free Hotline at 1-800-441-2555.

Farm Safety Event Attracts Hundreds

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Hundreds of children, ages 8-13, participated in the annual Safe Kids Farm Family Safety Day, Manheim Fairgrounds, April 7. Separate training was provided for the different age groups.

Kids were taught precautions to use when working near water, lawn mowers, tractors, animals, and confined spaces. Electrical and fire safety with instruction on calling 911 were also taught.

Here are some photographs of the Farm Family Safety Day.

Children were divided into groups according to age.

Free lunch is included in the all day event.

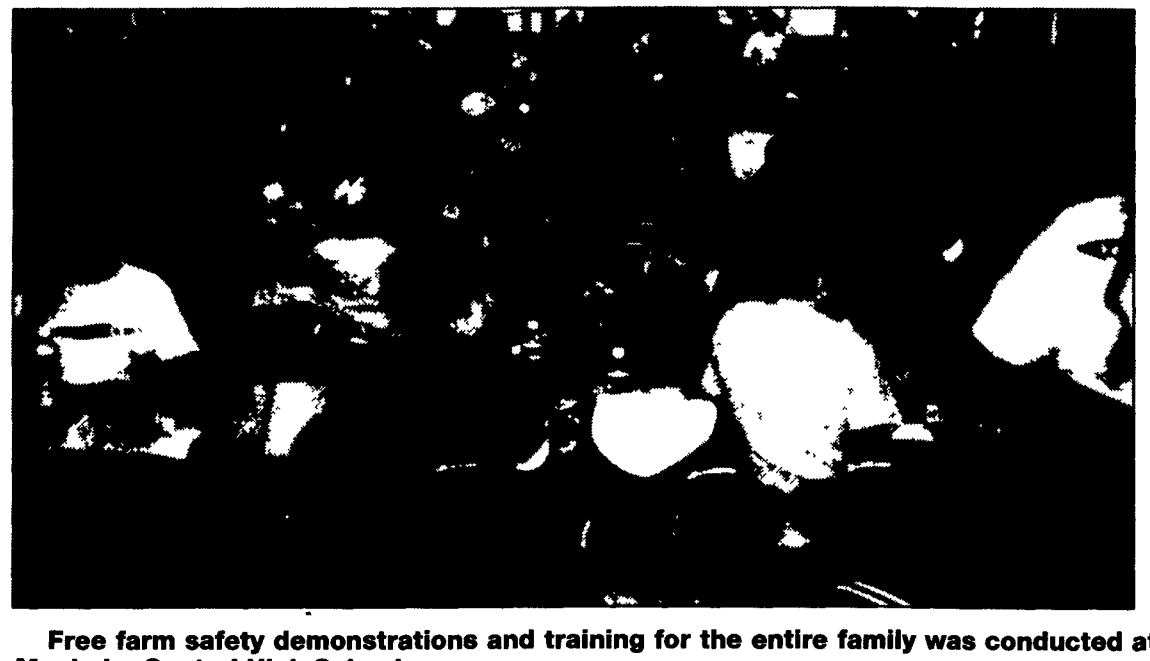
Lawn mowers are dangerous if not operated safely. Participants heard ways to reduce accidents during the upcoming months.

A 4-H club demonstrated the safe way to approach animals and to protect oneself from unintentional injury.

Transportation to the event came in many forms.

Children practice escaping from a fire by entering cardboard boxes and pretending it is on fire.

Tractor safety tips are needed for all age groups. Demonstrations were conducted for the entire family.



Free farm safety demonstrations and training for the entire family was conducted at Manheim Central High School.

Black Mist, Twister To Make Rare Appearance April 21-22

MARIETTA (Lancaster Co.) — Black Mist and Twister, two great granddaughters of Misty of Chincoteague, will be making a rare appearance in Lancaster County at the upcoming ninth annual Horse Farm Tour set for April 21 and 22.

The Chincoteague Pony Drill Team will have a few select Chincoteague ponies and drill team members appearing at the Stables at Village Square, 333 Coffee Goss Road, Marietta. This is a rare opportunity for people to meet the people and ponies up close that are part of this select drill team. It is the only drill team known in the world made up entirely of Chincoteague ponies.

The Chincoteague Pony Drill Team, including Black Mist and nine other Chincoteague ponies have appeared at the Kentucky Horse Park as well as Equitana USA, an international horse event, held annually in Louisville, Kentucky. Last year the drill team performed in an invitation only event at Equitana and was named the Youth Champion Drill Team. The trophy they won will be on display at the Horse Farm Tour.

As part of the day's activities at the Stables at Village Square, a few members will perform some of the riding drills that are part of the Chincoteague Pony Drill team act. There goal is to show those interested just how versatile and athletic the Chincoteague pony can be. These legendary ponies all date back to the wild ponies that live off the eastern shore of Virginia, made famous in the book Misty of Chincoteague by Marguerite Henry.

In addition, the Chincoteague Pony Drill team will have an information table and selling items to help support the drill team, including T-shirts. This will probably be the only appearance this year of the Chincoteagues in Pennsylvania at any farm or farm tour.

Doors open to the public at 10 a.m. on Saturday and noon on Sunday. On Saturday, the Chincoteagues will perform at 11:30 a.m., followed by colt breaking, part one at 1 p.m. hunt seat demonstration at 2 p.m. and barrel racing at 3 p.m. On Sunday, the drill team will perform at 12:30 p.m., colt breaking, part two will happen at 2 p.m., with a western pleasure demonstration held at 3 p.m. The barn closes at 4 p.m. both days.

The Stable at Village Square is a new 24 stall training and boarding facility with box stalls, wash bays, tack rooms, heated lounge, rubber footing in an indoor arena, turnouts, a large sand outdoor ring, round pen and much more. They offer a full service training and boarding facility, including breaking fitting, show prep and training and offering beginner through advanced lessons in basic horsemanship, hunt seat, western and driving.

The Stable at Village Square is located at 333 Coffee Goss Road, Marietta. From York or Lancaster take Rt. 30 to the Rt. 441 exit. Go north on Rt. 441 towards Marietta about four miles. Turn right onto Rt. 743. Continue to the first road to the right (Coffee Goss Road) and turn right. Turn right at the drive with the sign Stables at Village Square.

For more information about the stables, call (717) 426-1559.

Arbor Day Is Friday, April 27

SPRING GROVE (York Co.) — Arbor Day will be observed this year in Pennsylvania on Fri., Apr. 27. This has been designated by our legislative to recognize the important part trees, and the products, which come from them, play in maintaining the quality of life Pennsylvanians, enjoy.

Even before Arbor Day officially arrives, landowners in south central Pennsylvania have been busy planting thousands of evergreen tree seedlings furnished through The Glatfelter Pulp Wood Company's annual cost sharing program. This program, which has been responsible for the planting of over 19 million seedlings in Pennsylvania since its beginning in 1951, shares the cost of the seedlings.

Landowners in Adams, Berks, Cumberland, Dauphin, Franklin, Fulton, Huntingdon, Juniata, Lancaster, Lebanon, Mifflin, Northumberland, Perry, Schuylkill, Snyder and York counties are eligible to participate.

All trees become the property of the landowner who decides when they will be harvested.

A 'Long' Way To Winning Angus Honors

AIRVILLE (York Co.) — Hope Long knows how it feels to stand at either end of a show cattle lineup.

"My first year of showing, I stood at the bottom of a class of seven," relates this bubbly, outgoing junior beef breeder. She returned to the show ring a year later and took home a grand champion steer title with her Angus crossbred entry.

From a family room filled with show photos, show banners, trophies, and show awards of all sizes, the Airville young woman relates how her eight years of junior beef breeding and showing have been a bit of emotional roller coaster ride.

"I've had my ups and downs," said Hope, 15, of the satisfaction of having her show cattle do well coupled with frustration at losing some of them in painful circumstances. Her second Angus heifer, purchased toward her beef breeding and herd building goals, died of a lung tumor just a few months after Hope brought her home.

Two years ago, exhibiting her first bred and owned heifer, Hope was thrilled to earn supreme champion honors at the Queen Anne's County Fair and to win again at the York Fair. When that prized heifer came down with viral pneumonia and died, the entire family, including parents Sam and Vickie, and younger twins Kim and Kurt, mourned her death together.

Despite the emotional swings that sometimes comes with livestock breeding, the Long family is dedicated to their herd of purebred Angus cows and the extra-mile effort they sometimes demand. Besides breeding and showing, they support and participate in breed and industry activities and related organizations.

At the state Angus Association's annual awards program, held annually in January during Farm Show week, Hope was named one of the state's Angus princesses, while Kim, 12, was selected to be an Angus sweetheart. Along with Pennsylvania Angus queen Samantha Beck, Huntingdon County; princess Eliza Walton, Chester County; and sweetheart Katrina Frey, Quarryville, Lancaster County, the Long sisters help to represent the Angus breed at various shows and events around the state.

After buying her first purebred Angus heifer as a third-year 4-H project, Hope began showing at the state breed show, held annually during July in Huntingdon County. She quickly acquired leadership roles in the group of about 100 active, plus about an equal number of less involved, junior members. Hope current handles the state's junior association secretary position, along with serving on various committees.

Kim, too, has experienced emotional highs and lows with her beef animals. The second cow she owned had a bull calf, which she named Sonic. A show ring pleaser, Sonic snagged champion bull honors as a yearling at the Timonium, Maryland show. When Kim's cow calved back again, with a heifer, it died.

"But she made up for that loss; she had twin heifers the next time," grins Kim, proud owner of the only pair of twins the Long herd has ever produced.

Sam and Vickie Long both grew up on Lancaster County dairy farms and moved their family to their Long View Acres farm just east of the village of Airville five years ago. The farm's 15-acres are cropped to pasture for the beef herd, with some grass hay taken off early in the season.

Hope first enrolled as a 4-H'er in Lancaster's programs, and all three Long children became active York County members with the family's move. Along with their other projects, Hope and Kim both participate in 4-H meats judging programs. Hope was a member of last year's state-winning York County junior meats judging team, while placing as fourth-high individual at 4-H State Days competition.

Kim, a sixth-grade student with brother Kurt at Clearview Elementary School, enjoys sports along with breeding and showing beef cattle. She especially likes basketball, as a point guard or guard, and also plays intermediate soccer. A proclaimed "horse person," Kim enjoys equine riding competition; one of her goals is to have her very own Appaloosa.

Competition is keen in Angus breed circles, but the Long siblings have held their own in area show rings. Kurt's "Brenda" was a reserve champion winner, while Hope and Kim each had a second-place bred and owned placings. Each also shows a market steer, including a Blue Roan which Hope has this year, bred from one of her Angus with some Shorthorn blood crossed in.

But show seasons have grown even more hectic in recent years for the Long family with the addition of other breeds of livestock to their show strings.

"My mom loves the pigs," said Hope of their branching out into swine showing. She and Kim both show pigs, with Kim exhibiting five head of market hogs last year. Hope raised a pair of market porkers last season, but is considering a few more for the upcoming exhibit season.

Hope has also taken a liking to sheep, showing them as one of several FFA projects she carries as a sophomore at Red Lion Area High School. As a fledgling shepherd, she again found herself on the bottom of a show class as the York Fair. Her sheep finishing is only one of several diverse FFA projects, including beef breeding and finishing, swine finishing, and on-farm work experience. She is chapter reporter and hopes to run for a county office in upcoming years, along with working toward her Keystone Degree.

"My goal is to win a star production award," Hope said of her motivation to excel in her FFA projects and participation.

Though active in school, sports, and 4-H project pursuits, the Long siblings regularly tend, groom, and exercise their own animals. That effort picks up during the summer, with extra market project animals to look after and hay to be made. Steers get a cooling bath nearly every day, plus their own fans during summer heat to help keep them well-conditioned.

While the family's show interest focuses on junior competition, the Long children are quick to credit their parents for their help, encouragement, and enthusiasm.

"Dad has helped us learn about beef and he just loves to show," Hope adds. When two breed shows conflict, she counts on him to lend a hand at the halter of her beef animals for open class events.

After gaining public-appearance experience as an Angus princess and acquiring more personal mobility after completing her driving requirements, Hope may compete for the state crown as a goal. Kim has several more years in which she can participate in the ascending levels of the breed royalty programs.

All things considered, the "ups" of their beef breeding involvement have vastly outweighed the "downs" for these Airville Angus enthusiasts.

The Long line of Pennsylvania Angus royalty: Hope Long is a Pennsylvania Angus Princess and Kim Long, right, is a Pennsylvania Angus Sweetheart.

From front, Hope, Kim and Kurt spend part of a spring vacation day from school grooming their Angus show heifers.

Hope, left, and Kim Long display some of their favorite show memorabilia. Hope holds the large trophy she received in 1995 for her first champion steer and her award for first bred and owned at the Atlantic National Angus show at Timonium last year. Kim's trophy was for exhibiting the grand champion steer at the 2000 Queen Anne's County fair.

Additional varieties will also be blooming throughout the perennial garden, the garden of old roses and the beds of the northwest shrub borders as well, said Barbara Whitcraft, director of Hershey Gardens.

"Our tulip display is a color extravaganza," said Whitcraft. "We've intentionally planted different cultivars of tulips to create a vivid succession of bloom over the next few weeks. We encourage visitors to stop by as often as possible to take advantage of the ever-changing, picture-perfect scenery."

Open daily April 1 through Oct. 31, Hershey Gardens' hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. April through September, with evening hours until 8 p.m. on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays between Memorial Day and Labor Day. Seed Project Has Its Roots In Preservation

Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Amidst today's forward-thinking, fast-paced world, preserving pieces of the past becomes increasingly important.

At Landis Valley Museum, host of the Heirloom Seed Project, conservation is of paramount importance. In keeping with this emphasis on recording and capturing the past, the project propagates strains of plants abundant in the past but perhaps scarce today.

The purpose of the project is to encourage the preservation of traditional strains of historic open-pollinated varieties of plants grown by the Pennsylvania Germans before 1940, and which may have history extending back to the early 1800s.

By definition, heirloom seeds are varieties passed from generation to generation, producing fruits and seeds that resemble the parents.

Most of the varieties in the program can be traced to use in Lancaster. The "roots" go back to 1930-1940, and most much older than that, according to Black.

The seeds in the project have historical significance to Pennsylvania Germans dating from the mid 1700s to 1940.

To introduce gardeners to the seed and plant offerings, along with heirloom varieties which do not meet the historical qualification for the project, some of the seed varieties are offered in the annual Mother's Day weekend event, the "Herb and Garden Faire."

The project includes researching, trialing, and preserving more than 200 varieties of vegetables, herbs, field crops, and ornamentals.

Research helps to determine the age of a variety. Questioning local residents, reading diaries, old seed catalogs and almanacs, newspapers, magazines, or working with preservationists help in the documentation process.

"We want to position ourselves for expansion," said Jennie Black, Heirloom Seed Project coordinator. "We would like to offer seeds from the Internet."

With the addition of computers last year, combined with the inventory work and germination testing done by employees and volunteers, this may become a reality. Last month they received their organic certification.

Besides the three plots grown strictly for seed harvests, the gardens, situated on four acres include Pennsylvania German folk medicine garden, a dye and textile garden, an 18th century women's kitchen garden, a traditional Pennsylvania German style of garden, a Victorian garden, and an experimental no-till garden.

Peggy Craige, Lancaster, prepares a germination test for seeds. Labeled with the date, time, and year the seeds were grown, the bags will be checked in three to four days to see if they have germinated and how fast they have sprouted. Different seeds have their own rate of germination.

Gail Merchant, Mount Joy, and Eric Habegger, Akron, work with the "babies" in one of two hoop houses.

Jennie Black, Heirloom Seed Project coordinator, stands in front of some of the 200 varieties of seeds in the project.

Two hoop houses are also utilized in the project.

A native plant trail educates both children and adults, along with demonstration plots with historic crops such as buckwheat, flax, and spelt.

A dye garden is "pressed" into service during workshops for museum visitors. Since Pennsylvania Germans made and dyed their own clothes, the garden was an appropriate addition.

According to Black many of the plants, such as German chamomile, yellow bedstraw, and goldenrod make a yellow color. bloodroot creates a red color and Hollyhocks yield a reddish-orange color.

Yellow is the easier and most intense color given from the plants, while blue is the hardest to get.

Plants were useful for other purposes, also. Soapwort, for example, was used to create suds to wash linens. Pennyroyal or Tansy was folded into or even worn in clothes as an insect repellent. "Dye plants are easy to maintain," said Black. "Many of them are 'weedy' plants." Additionally Lavender was folded in linen layers for fragrance.

The project is important, said Black, because of its historical significance. It is also, according to Black, an alternative to hybrid or genetically-modified strains.

Black maintains that volunteers are essential to the operation of the project and gardens at the museum. Twenty regular volunteers, plus youth who volunteer during the summer months, work in the office or in the gardens.

Several volunteers are in charge of planning, maintaining, and harvesting their own specific garden. Volunteers also assist in local school education projects.

The seed project began 20 years ago by the agriculture curator who conducted research on varieties grown by Germans in the 1740-1940 era, the time period interpreted at the museum. Donations of seeds and plants not only inaugurated but also continue to sustain and even expand the project.

According to Black, donations come from "people in the area whose family has grown the seeds for generations."

Most of the seeds were once used in Lancaster, said Black. The gherken cucumber, for example, is also called the West Indies cucumber, obviously not native to Germany but used in the area.

The project includes seeds in danger of becoming extinct. The "Ariane" flax variety, from Holland, is no longer available anywhere else in the world. "We also have rare varieties which are scarce in other places. We try to maintain those areas, too," said Black.

"We have a mailing list from all over the U.S. and 14 foreign countries," said Black, who said that the project has sent seeds anywhere from urban gardens in New York City to Nicaragua.

Call Beth at (717) 569-0401, ext. 202, for catalogs or seed ordering information.

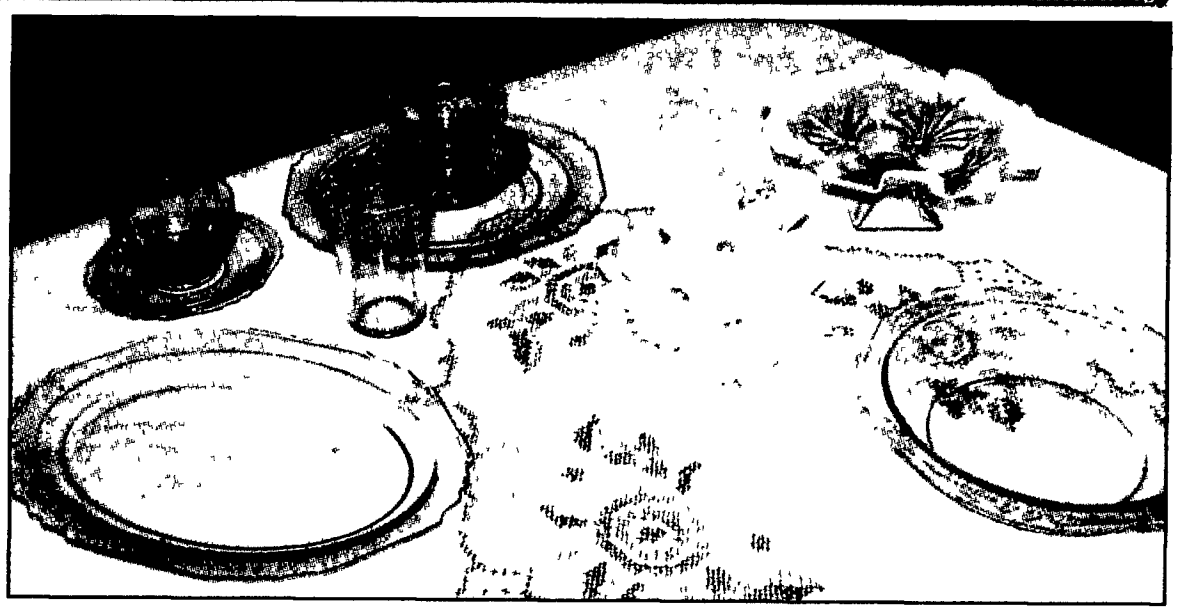
Charles Diefenderfer, a collector and auctioneer in Berks County, specializes in Depression-Era glassware. "It depends on your school of thought, but I consider Depression glass is any glassware made in America between 1928-1940," Diefenderfer said.



Patterns such as Florentine I were given away as free premiums during the Depression Era. These simple but elegant pieces were found in 25-pound bags of rolled oats, a breakfast staple during the Depression Era. Housewives collected whole sets of the glassware through these give aways.

Glassware Collectors Influenced By Nostalgia, Aesthetic Appeal

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

MORGANTOWN (Berks Co.) — Paying thousands of dollars for handblown glassware isn't possible for many people who admire the fragile loveliness of heirloom pieces.

A solution is collecting the more affordable Depression Era glassware. American glass manufacturers produced the inexpensive machine-made glass in a variety of colors, patterns, and styles. Pieces were machine molded by forcing liquid glass through pipes into pressing molds that were etched with a pattern.

Because most of the glassware was made between 1920-1940, it became known as Depression Era glass.

For the first time in history, glassware became affordable to the common household.

Cereal companies, gas stations, soap manufacturers, and a variety of businesses enticed customers into buying their products by offering them a free piece of the pretty glassware. Many designs were patterned after handblown traditional American and English designs and housewives eagerly collected whole sets through these giveaways.

Some pieces sold in five and dime stores for pennies. Sears Roebuck offered a complete set for four at $1.99, which made it affordable for households in the height of Depression.

Although these pieces were prolific because almost every household had a few pieces, it is becoming more difficult to find popular patterns at affordable prices. Many of the patterns are hoarded because of growing popularity among collectors and by baby boomers who want to own a part of American history.

Used in hotel rooms during the turn of the 20th century, large Fostoria washbowl sets are hard to find in perfect condition. In January, an unchipped set like this sold for $3,800.

Some of the premium pieces can bring as much as $650-$700 each. If you're lucky; however, you can find some plates and sherbets for $20-$40 apiece. Cups, gravy boats, and serving pieces are more difficult to find. A formerly 15-cent butter dish sells for between $650-$700 today.

But for collectors influenced by the nostalgia it evokes or for those in quest of rare pieces or complete sets, price has no limits.

Along with higher prices, reproductions have infiltrated the market and are becoming harder to differentiate from the real thing.

Charles Diefenderfer, a collector and auctioneer in Berks County, specializes in Depression-Era glassware. "Anyone who deals a lot in glassware gets burned (by reproductions) at least once; otherwise, he's a liar. Chalk it up as a learning process."

He said, "The secret is knowing what patterns are reproduced, and then to be skeptical, especially if it is priced cheap."

The easiest way to discern if a piece is a reproduction is to compare it with an original piece. Usually reproductions are slightly different in coloring than originals.

"If you have only one piece at a sale it is harder to tell," Diefenderfer said.

When reproductions first hit the market, it wiped out the resale value of many original pieces. According to Diefenderfer, reproductions do not have the same effect today because collectors are in search of original and rare pieces. Some collect whole sets of one pattern and others specialized in collecting specific items such as creamers or gravy boats in many different patterns.

Popular colors are pink, green, amber, blue and crystal (clear). The deeper shades of red, purple, and burgundy were more expensive to produce and are more difficult to find today.

While many pieces are difficult to find without chips or cracks, Diefenderfer said that many pieces are being discovered in England. The English, according to Diefenderfer, snubbed American glassware from the beginning and are now very willing to ship it back to America, where it commands higher prices.

A set of cherry blossom green mugs sold for $300 each recently, which Diefenderfer considers a steal.

"What people desire is a matter of taste. If everyone liked the same thing, life would be boring," Diefenderfer said.

For those interested in Depression glass, Diefenderfer said, "It depends on your school of thought, but I consider Depression glass is any glassware made in America between 1928-1940," Diefenderfer said. "There are about 125 major patterns that were basically produced in factories in Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Virginia."

The aesthetic beauty of Depression-Era glassware continues to promote its popularity. Collect it, and you'll buy a whole piece of intriquing American history with it.

Questions And Answers

While cleaning out the attic on my grandparents farm, I found an interesting arm chair that appears to be made of metal wire. It needs a paint job, but is in otherwise good condition. Any idea of age or value?

M.R. — Cincinnati, Ohio

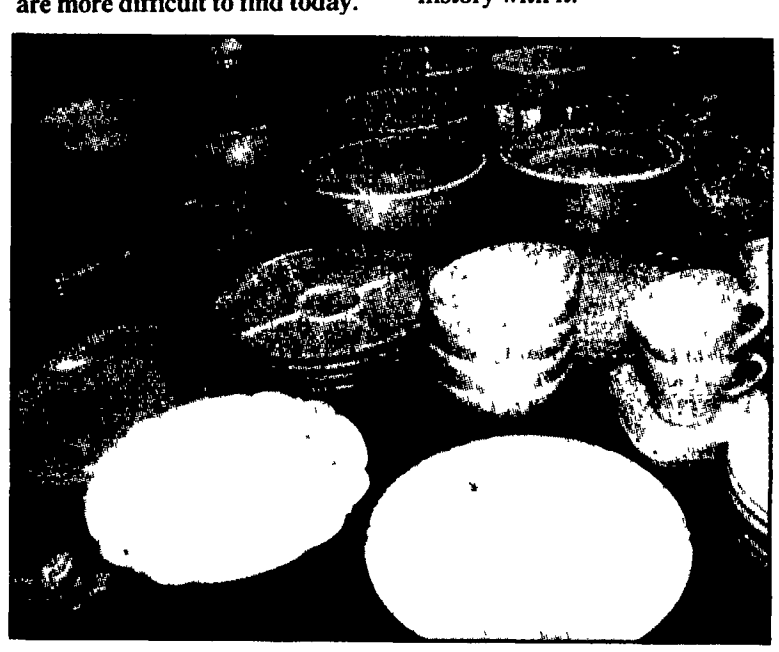
Your Victorian wire chair, in good condition, could sell at auction for around $400.

Among my late father's belongings was a beautiful easel inlaid with mother-of-pearl. Since he traveled to the middle east, where he was born, I feel it came from there. It is ornately carved with palmette and floral designs. I love it and would like an idea of value.

T.C. — Cincinnati, Ohio

From your description, your late 19th century easel probably originated in Syria. Similar pieces have sold for over a $1,000 at auction.

This Pennsylvania German birth and baptismal fraktur dated 1800 is attributed to artist Daniel Otto. The alligator and two mer-people (mermaid and man) with vibrant color created the high value and rarity of the 12-inch by 7½-inch Dauphin County fraktur. It recently sold to a telephone bidder for $120,000 during the Ziegler Auction Company, Ltd. of Hershey.



The latest collector's rage is jadite, made popular by Martha Stewart, home decorating guru.

Theorem Paintings Unique American Folk Art

Chances are you've seen theorem paintings at antique shows and wondered what they were. These highly stylized still life paintings, usually of baskets of fruit and flowers, at first glance are reminiscent of the decorative motifs found on the backs of early Hitchcock chairs. And well they might be.

The Hitchcock chair designs from 1820 to 1830 used the same stenciling techniques. During the time the stencils, were cut from many pieces and put together in different arrangements. Later a single stencil was used on Hitchcock chairs.

The most common theorem paintings are of baskets of fruit and flowers, but some very intricate theorems depicted landscapes and portraits. The landscapes show a separation of the different parts, put together to form a single subject such as a house or tree. Sometimes a freehand painting completed the painting.

The word "theorem" means stencil. Stencils have been used to decorate everything from 19th century hatboxes to floors, linens and walls. However, it is the still life theorem paintings that were hung on walls, instead of conventional paintings that collectors of Americana look for. When they come to auction, prices can range from $800 to more than $8,000. Recently, several velvet painted theorems were sold at auction for more than $800 each. Most were unsigned.

The earliest known types of theorems were painted on furniture in the 17th century by Dutch settlers in the Hudson Valley. They used a technique known as Grisaille — a gray wash. Grisaille still life paintings were done on paper in shades of gray. Because of their fragility they are scarce and costly. In part because they were difficult to make. Unlike the later colorful theorems, Grisaille have a very primitive quality

In America, theorem paintings seem to have originated in New England. Many of the paintings were cut from heavy paper and done by housewives and young women in academies. For the velvet theorems a firm, white cotton velvet was stretched and prepared like a canvas.

Theorems on velvet were popular from 1800 to the 1860s. Until recently, they were unpopular with collectors who associated them with the tacky velvet paintings sold to tourists in the 1960s-1970s. They still sell for half of the price for watercolor theorems. The more complex and unusual the design the higher the price.

The stencil designs were carefully arranged then filled in with watercolors or oils. Other times, depending on the talent of the artist, the stencils were done freehand from instruction books.

Historic Interpretation At The Ephrata Cloister

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Did you ever wonder how flax is turned into linen?

How about what medicine was like for the soldiers in the Revolution.

Are you interested in colonial food preparation?

Ever have a burning desire to know what a petticoat is and what it was used for? Or why people dressed the way they did in Colonial America?

If you answered "yes" to any of these questions, the Ephrata Cloister has an opportunity for you.

On April 26 and April 28, from 10 a.m. to noon, the Ephrata Cloister is offering historical interpretation seminars on four key Colonial topics: Flax to Linen, Practices and Tools of the 18th century Physician, The Food and Breads of the Times, and Clothing and the Life of the German Colonist in the 18th century.

Interpreters will meet and greet visitors from all over the world. Join the team of Ephrata Cloister volunteers and interpret this fascinating story of German immigrants and Lancaster County history.

The Ephrata Cloister is located in Ephrata Borough on Route 322 at the intersection of Route 272.

theorems that have animals, birds, and butterflies in addition to the traditional basket of fruit. Pass up examples with rips, yellowing or stains. Theorems were also used in mourning paintings.

It is possible to date a theorem by the style of the bowl or basket holding floral or fruit arrangements. For instance, pressed glass compotes weren't made before the 1830s.

The 1976 Bicentennial revived interest in making and collecting theorems. Many contemporary painters of theorems on velvet can command top dollar. Best known are David Ellinger and William Rank, both from Pennsylvania.

Unfortunately, there are also fakes being passed off as old. Study museum examples, if possible, before investing too much money.

Artist Uses Antique Materials In Authentic Traditional Crafts

MORGANTOWN (Berks Co.) — Heatherly Hale's band boxes sold at The Mill Property Antiques in Morgantown may be recently assembled, but they are not made with new materials.

Hale spends much of her time carefully seeking vintage wall coverings to decorate the boxes she constructs herself. "The craft store boxes just don't look right," she said of bulkier mass produced paper boxes.

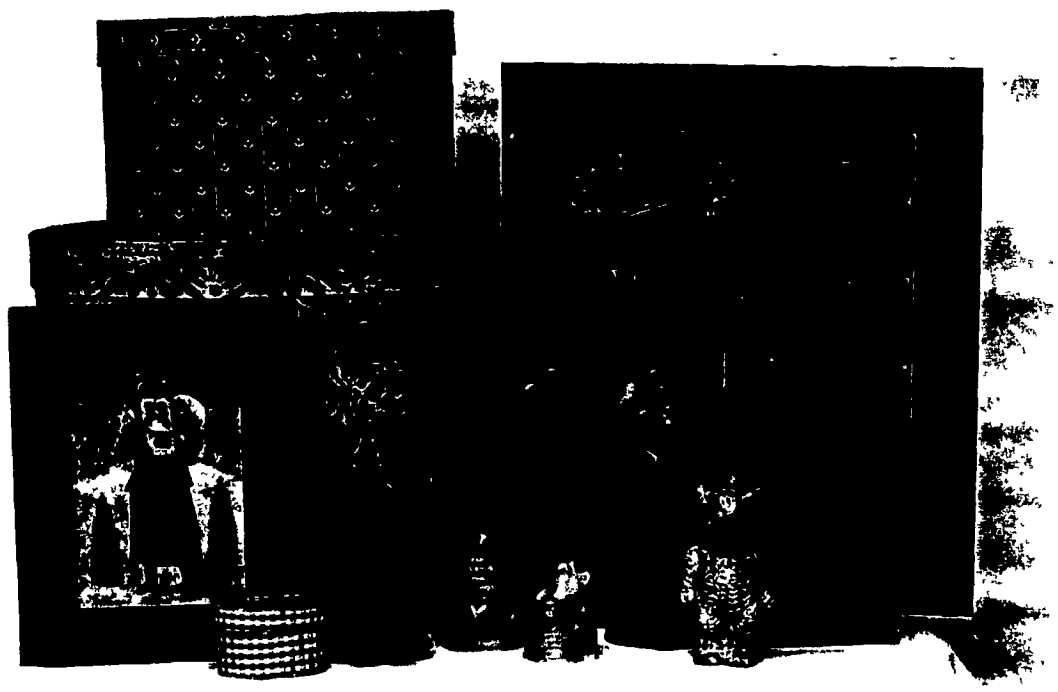
Handmade of cardboard, her band boxes have a lining papered with antique Webster dictionary pages. Said Hale, "I almost died when I saw the same dictionary I had been cutting apart selling for $300 at auction." The faded pages with old illustrations serve as a perfect lining and bottom for the band boxes that look at home in the antique co-op.

The boxes which are available in a variety of sizes with different wall paper patterns and colors are displayed with canvas floor cloths she stencils and handpaints. The walls are hung with her own line of folk art prints. Working in traditional craft methods, she is not interested in following the latest craft trends.

"I'm more concerned with improving on the products I'm already making," said the artist who has been marketing her prints since 1987. The holiday themes and florals are displayed in handmade frames painted to complement each print. The prints have a softened, older look and work well with primitive furnishings.

The floor cloths and band boxes are a more recent addition, and she also makes herbal sachets with hand-painted designs on cotton. She has added another artist's collection of handmade figural beeswax candles.

Hale's work can be purchased at The Mill Property Antiques located on Main Street in Morgantown at the intersections of routes 10, 23 and I-176. Hours are seven days a week from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Many country furnishings are available among the antiques and collectibles of more than 90 dealers covering two floors. For more information, call the store at (610) 286-8854.



Heatherly Hale uses vintage wall coverings and an antique dictionary to create many traditional crafts.

Bobcat Introduces New Compact Skid-Steer Loader

WEST FARGO, N.D. — Bobcat Company, a business unit of Ingersoll-Rand Company and leading designer and manufacturer of compact equipment, announces the new Bobcat® 463 ultra-compact skid-steer loader. Nicknamed the Mini-Bob™, the smallest model in the Bobcat loader line offers a 700-pound rated operating capacity (ROC) and the comfort and safety features of an operator cab.

Measuring just three-feet wide and six-feet tall, the 15.7-horsepower Bobcat 463 can power numerous attachments with its 10 gallon-per-minute (gpm) hydraulic flow and 2,450 (psi) hydraulic system pressure.

The ultra-compact 463 is a multiple-attachment carrier for tough jobs in tight spaces. It easily maneuvers through narrow doorways, aisles, alleys and gates, and it is ideal for a number of applications, including hobby farm, landscape, demolition and construction. With travel speed of 6.2 mph, the loader covers job-site ground quickly, and at just 2,708 pounds, it is also easy to transport. It weighs 200 pounds more than its predecessor, the Bobcat 453.

New Bobcat Ultra-Compact Steer Loader.

Attachments versatility. Advanced hydraulics enable the loader to operate the following attachments: angle brooms, augers, backhoes, breakers, industrial and utility buckets, dumping hoppers, landplanes, mini scrapers, pallet forks, snow blades, snow blowers, sweepers, tillers, utility blades and forks, and trenchers. For fast and secure attachment changes, the new two-lever Bob-Tach mounting system is standard equipment on the 463.

Building on the Bobcat 453 success. Bobcat Company engineers based the 463 on the successful Bobcat 453 model. For additional attachment versatility, the 463 has 47 percent more hydraulic flow and two and a half times as much hydraulic horsepower. The machine also provides enhanced lifting power, using a larger lift cylinder rod and 40 percent more breakout force.

Easily serviced and maintained. The 463 has a tilt-up operator cab for quick and easy access to hydraulic and hydrostatic components. Lifting the cab takes less than five minutes. The loader's swing-out tailgate gives users immediate access to the engine oil dipstick, drain and fill; fuel filter; air cleaner; battery; starter; alternator; and coolant fill.

Bobcat Company manufactures skid-steer loaders, compact track loaders, compact hydraulic excavators, telescopic tool carriers and more than 50 types of job-matched attachments at plants in Gwinner and Bismarck, N.D., Grove City and Erskine, Minn., and Pontchateau, France. Bobcat Company is a unit of Ingersoll-Rand Company, Woodcliff Lake, N.J.

Case Products Earn Seven Engineering Awards

RACINE, Wis. — Case IH products were recognized more than any other ag equipment manufacturer for outstanding innovation in agricultural, food and biological product and systems technology in Resource magazine's AE50 honors.

In all, seven Case IH products were recognized by the magazine, which is published by the American Society of Agricultural Engineers.

Case IH innovations making the elite list were:

- MX Series Magnum™ tractors, which combine high performance features with operator comfort.
- Cyclo Air® meter attachment, a highly economical all-crop seeding system.
- SDX30 single disk no-till air drill, a low disturbance, single-disk planting tool that can penetrate high-residue conditions.
- 8880 self-propelled (SP) windrower with 725 rotary disc hay header, an efficient and high-productivity system for hay cutting and conditioning.
- RS "One" Series variable chamber round balers, which use a wide pickup for better packing on the bale sides and cleaner capture of the windrow.
- 2000 Advanced Farming Systems (AFS) yield monitor system, which helps farmers keep close tabs on harvest operations for improved management.
- AFS Instant Application Map™ 2000 software, which allows farmers to create customized input rate prescriptions for variable-rate seed and fertilizer placement.

The year's 50 best products win the prestigious AE50 awards. Companies from around the world submit entries to the annual competition, and a panel of international engineering experts chooses the best products. Recipients were featured in Resource, the publication of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers (ASAE).

"All Case IH products begin with customer input to find what is really needed out in the field," said Russ Green, senior director of marketing for the North American Case IH agricultural business. "Then our engineers build tractors, implements and software that help farmers increase their productivity and success."

Resource magazine sponsors the AE50 award program to emphasize the crucial role of new products and systems in bringing advanced technology to the marketplace. All entries must exhibit a new technology or advancement of a previous technology, and have a broad impact on the industry.

NC+ Tests All Corn Hybrids For StarLink

LINCOLN, Neb. — NC+ has tested all of its corn hybrids for the presence of the Cry9C protein, otherwise known as StarLink.

"NC+ followed testing procedures and guidelines recommended by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA)," said NC+ President Larry Schuett. "A few of our seed lots tested positive for StarLink contamination and those lots will not be sold to customers."

In addition to testing NC+ hybrid seed, Schuett said the company has also tested its parent seed stock for StarLink. This is the seed that will be used to produce hybrid seed corn in 2001.

"We want to assure our customers that the NC+ corn hybrids they plant this spring have tested negative for the Cry9C protein, in accordance with or exceeding the quality standards set forth in the USDA's seed testing and sampling recommendations," Schuett said. "The seed industry has an important role to play in resolving the StarLink situation and NC+ will continue to be a leader in that process."

DuPont Offers Weed-Free Pledge As Part Of Program To Improve Weed Control In Roundup Ready Soybeans

WILMINGTON, Del. — Soybean growers who plant Roundup Ready soybeans now can get improved weed control from planting to harvest that's backed by a weed-free pledge.

DuPont Crop Protection is introducing its Weed-Free Pledge program this season for growers who make a preemergence application of DuPont™ Canopy XL® herbicide followed by Roundup Ultra on their Roundup Ready soybean fields, said Troy Dean, DuPont product manager.

Under the pledge, if there's another flush of weeds after using the recommended program, DuPont will pay qualified growers for an additional treatment of up to 32 ounces of Roundup Ultra, explained Dean.

"We're offering the Weed-Free Pledge because we're confident in the performance of our products," said Dean. "This pledge is one of the best in the industry. It reduces retailers' and growers' risks, and assures them that DuPont will be there to stand behind our recommendations."

Dean explained that the Weed-Free Pledge and Canopy XL® program are being offered in part to meet the needs of growers who are seeing weed shifts in Roundup Ready soybean fields.

"Growers, dealers and weed specialists across the Midwest are reporting an increasing problem with winter annuals, as well as waterhemp, black nightshade and velvetleaf," said Dean. "Last fall, Ohio State University Extension reported in a newsletter that winter annual populations seem to have been at an all-time high over the past several years, and explained that one factor may be the switch from preplant/preemergence herbicide programs to Roundup Ready and other total postemergence programs.

"That's why we're recommending Canopy XL® and backing it with the Weed-Free Pledge. Canopy XL® provides the type of burndown and residual control that growers need to get their beans off to a clean start while preventing or controlling weed shifts."

DuPont™ Canopy XL® herbicide provides burndown or preemergence control of more than 40 grasses and broadleaves, including waterhemp, black nightshade, foxtails, nutsedge, smartweed, velvetleaf and morningglory. It's recommended for use in the south Midwest, such as Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky.

"What makes Canopy XL® different from alternatives is that it burns down a broader spectrum of weeds — including henbit, wild garlic and dandelion — and offers broad-spectrum residual control," said Dean. "The residual control from Canopy XL® gives growers more time to make the in-season application of glyphosate. They can work around rainy periods, and time the glyphosate application closer to canopy closure when it works best. This also reduces the risk of costly late-season weed flushes."

Growers who follow the recommended program are automatically eligible for the Weed-Free Pledge. For more details about the Weed-Feed Pledge and requirements, growers should see their local DuPont dealer.

Land Pride Introduces Powered Ditcher

SALINA, Kan. — Land Pride's DT55 Series Powered Ditcher is a versatile tool to use in many water control applications. Cleaning water ditches along roadsides or in farm fields to drain standing water away from crops, this Ditcher makes it simple.

The heavy-duty six bladed 20-inch impeller features replaceable cutting edges to take on rough and rocky conditions. The optional skid shoe or gauge wheel can both help control depth. With the optional material control chute in place, dirt can be placed just next to the machine, or thrown many feet away to reshape terraces. An optical four-foot blade can be attached to aid in reshaping terraces and grader ditches and an optional ripper shank is also available to tear through hard packed soils.

The Grand L Series tractors from Kubota, ranging from 22 5 PTO HP to 40 5 PTO HP, are as strong, quiet and dependable as any tractor in their class. The L Series tractors come equipped with a 3 point hitch, live independent Hydraulic PTO and hydrostatic power steering which makes them ideal for a multitude of tasks on the farm

The hydrostatic transmission and 4WD system make the Grand L Series tractors very maneuverable, which is especially helpful when working in tight spaces A single pedal controls both speed and direction, and that allows you to change quickly without shifting or clutching

Looking for More Power & Performan

Choose a Dependable Case-IH Magnum from Hoober

"We have six Case IH tractors from Hoober, and we run our tractors 24 hours a day, seven days a week from Thanksgiving until mid to late-March every year The power is way up there and the Cummins turbo diesel engines in those tractors are excellent The transmissions are heavy-duty and they really hold up We couldn't ask for more out of a tractor And Hoober really makes an effort to please the customer they really do Their response time is excellent and it's because of their service that we've been with them so long "

How reliable have the tractors been for Philadelphia Park? One of the track's two 7110 Magnums has logged 20,700 hours with no major problems while the other Magnum is still going strong after 18,000 hours of service

Roy Smith - Track Superintendent, Tom Dasher – Head Mechanic Philadelphia Park

CASE IH

The Standard By Which All Discs are Measured

Take a look at the features that make the new Krause 7400 the best disc on the market today.

1 Transport Width

With a road width of only 10' 11", the 18' and 21' Krause 7400 Discs make transportation easy.

2 Double Offset Designed Frame

The 7400's strength starts with a rugged 5' x 7' mainframe that comes complete with a three-year warranty. The double offset gang design provides a level-field finish, the "trademark" of a Krause disc

3 Rockflex Bearing Arms

New, heavier Rockflex bearing arms feature a full 1¼" thick by 2½" wide standard to flex over the toughest obstacles. These bearing arms are heat treated for durability.

4 Heavy-Duty Walking Tandem

Krause's heavy-duty walking tandem system smooths out rough fields, and rough roads when transporting. This feature gives you more precise depth control and more stable discing.

5 Wing Fold Hinges

Massive 1½" x 15' hinge bolts on the Krause 7400 distribute folding forces over a wide area, not concentrating them in a narrow hinge like some competitive designs.

6 Forward Action Wing Wheels

The forward action wing wheels rotate close to the front gangs for precise depth control on the Krause 7400 This design limits the need for optional front gauge wheels that are necessary on other brands

7 Heavy Cast Spools

The heavy cast spools multiply the strength of the Krause disc gang, making it the strongest in the industry. The design supports the disc blade more positively without creating a "stress line" like competitive designs.

8 Gang Bearings

Krause SuperSeal regreasable gang bearings are as tough and durable as the discs they come on They are protected in a ductile cast iron holder and encased in a heavy rubber boot to absorb shock

CLEMENTS & DEER CREEK

Your Hay & Forage Headquarters

Learn What Thousands of farmers have learned –

Hay dries faster in "Kuhn" windrows

Most types of rakes roll the hay across the ground, twisting it into a tight windrow that can't dry. Rotary rakes lift and carry hay "forkful by forkful" to form a light, fluffy windrow, which has maximum wind penetration. The result: Hay raked with a Kuhn rotary rake 8 hours after mowing generally has about a day less drying time, compared to unraked hay. And with less leaf loss than if raked when dry.

What You Don't Know About Rotary Rakes.

- Rotary rake windrows are less likely to be blown by strong winds.
- Dairy nutritionists prefer the lower dirt levels in rotary raked hay.
- No "roping" means no more uncontrollable "pulling" by baler pickups.
- Long flexible tines are less prone to break than short stiff tines on wheel & bar rakes.
- Virtually no stones are raked allowing you to merge ahead of choppers.
- Rotary rakes rake perfectly around corners, left or right.
- Set rotor speed for best raking with PTO drive, not dependent on ground speed.

Want proof that rotary rakes are better?

Call Deer Creek or Clements to arrange a demo near you, maybe on your farm.

The 6100 Series Rigid And Vertical Fold Planters.

Precision farming starts with precision seed placement. And that's exactly what you'll get with the White 6100 Series planters. Our pull-type planters feature an exclusive air-metering system that's designed to singulate every seed. Its low air pressure, edge-drop seed discs and short, 18" seed drop ensure precise seed placement for maximum germination.

Adaptable To Any Tillage Situation.
Our 4, 6, 8 and 12 row planters have the flexibility to meet most tillage practices both now and in the future. They're built rugged with a massive 7" x 7" frame and strong, welded-tongue design to handle the demands of heavy residue. Add a 6900 splitter attachment for interplant capability.

This season get the planter that places each seed where it'll grow the best — and perform the best. Stop by your AGCO® White Planter dealer today.

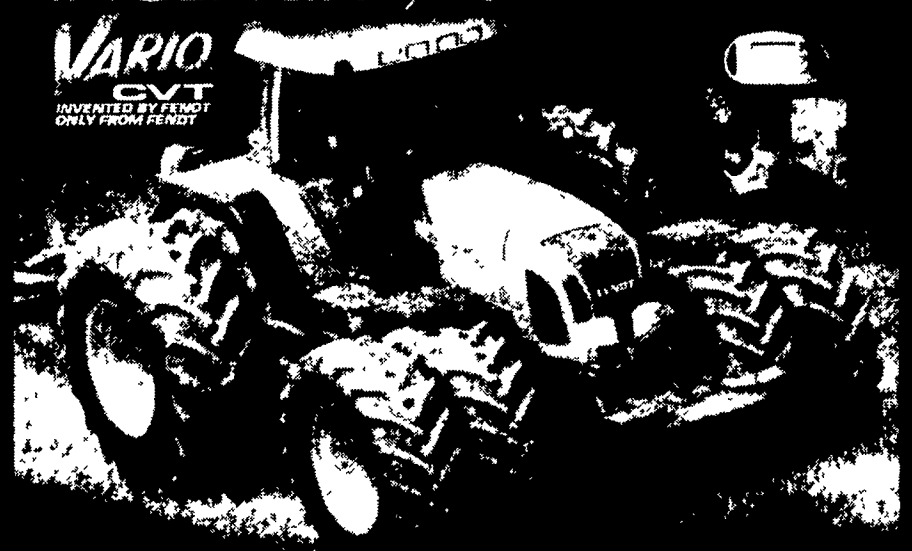
VARIO, THE NEW STEPLESS DRIVE TECHNOLOGY, IS ONLY AVAILABLE IN THE INGENUITY OF A FENDT.



A [illegible] has occurred in the engineering of tractor design. It will change the way you work.

Cutting-edge engineering has blended the efficiency of powershift and versatility of hydrostatic technology.

[illegible], an infinite selection of speeds with no shifting. Engine potential is maximized, giving you the exact working speed you require and not just something "close enough." Productivity rises noticeably. Fuel consumption drops.

All [illegible] plus hydraulics are now controlled through a joystick linked to the on-board computer. All the power and control is in a slight movement of your wrist. Power that ranges from 72 to 240 PTO horsepower.

[illegible] But it will have to be a FENDT. No other tractor in North America offers this amazing technology.

FENDT REVERSE STATION TRACTORS

When you invest in a FENDT Tractor with Reverse Station, you're actually getting several pieces of equipment. In less than a minute you can turn this ingenious tractor into a self-propelled forage harvester, swather, windrower, chopper, even a powerful snowthrower. Seat, steering wheel and the entire instrumentation swings 180 and locks in place. And from this position, you've never had a better view of your work.

WHAT'S BETTER THAN A SPLIT-ROW PLANTER?

Faster and more economical, a corn planter and a soybean drill could be right for you. Here's why:

➤ Two machines can boost productivity 96 percent! It takes a Knize 12/23-row planter nearly 127 hours to plant a 2,000-acre farm (half corn, half beans) With both a 12-row John Deere 1760 and 15-foot 1530 in the field, you could plant 2,333 acres of corn and 1,592 acres of soybeans in those 127 hours

➤ See us for all the details

ALL PARTS ARE NOT CREATED EQUAL . . . COUNT ON IT!

Just because parts are interchangeable doesn't mean they are exactly alike. Genuine Mueller parts are made with the same care and precision as the equipment on which they fit.

Count on Mueller for accuracy. Count on Mueller for reliability. Count on Mueller for profit.

It is the constant attention to perfection that gives Mueller the most highly regarded reputation in the industry. You've trusted Mueller for the equipment. Keep trusting Mueller for the exacting standards you've come to appreciate—standards that the others have yet to live up to. Mueller equipment, genuine Mueller parts, and a service record second to none are an unmatched combination.

Syngenta Announces New Touchdown Plan For Roundup Ready Crops

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Excellent weed control plus a plan to reduce risk from poor growing conditions. That's the payoff for using new Touchdown® herbicide with IQ Technology™ over the top of Roundup Ready® (RR™) corn and RR soybean varieties.

The Eastern Horticulture Touchdown Assurance Plan (TAP) recently unveiled by Syngenta, helps corn and soybean growers reduce their risk from unexpected poor growing conditions.

"The plan helps protect grower investments in weed control when they choose Touchdown for over-the-top application in their RR soybeans and RR corn," said Corey Huck, Syngenta crop manager.

The Eastern Horticulture TAP applies to growers in Connecticut, Delaware, Massachusetts, Maryland, Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont and West Virginia. The qualifying area also includes certain counties located in Michigan and Virginia. The TAP programs for growers in the midwest and south vary by crop and geography.

New Touchdown was recently labeled for use over-the-top of RR corn, RR soybeans and RR cotton. The new Touchdown Assurance Plan provides growers with replant assistance, replant burndown replacement and a "clean-to-canopy" assurance plan.

"Our Touchdown Assurance Plan is designed to protect a grower's investment in the Roundup Ready seed technology," Huck said. "It demonstrates that Syngenta stands behind the effectiveness of Touchdown for post-emergence weed control in Roundup Ready crops."

Syngenta's TAP differs from Monsanto's Roundup Rewards program in two important ways, according to Huck. "First, growers can qualify for TAP by using any brand of Roundup Ready seed including NK® brand seed and Pioneer® brand seed, which are not covered by the Roundup Rewards program," he said.

"Second, TAP provides growers with more options to control problem weeds by allowing the use of other herbicides in addition to Touchdown, including pre-emergence herbicides and post-emergence tankmixes. "We want to give growers flexibility and choice in their weed control programs," he added.

By applying Touchdown over RR crops, growers are automatically enrolled in the Touchdown Assurance Plan. TAP reduces production risks four important ways.

1. Stand to harvest protection. If RR corn or RR soybeans are destroyed by unfavorable weather conditions before Aug. 31, growers can qualify for a refund of up to $18 per unit for RR corn and up to $6.50 per bag for RR soybeans.

2. Replant burndown replacement: If Touchdown or Gramoxone® herbicide was applied to RR corn or RR soybean fields for burndown weed control prior to planting Roundup Ready crops and a crop loss occurs, Syngenta will refund up to the value of the original burndown used.

3. Clean to canopy plan: If growers use one of Syngenta's Clean to Canopy recommendations and an unexpected weed flush occurs, Syngenta will provide up to 32 ounces of Touchdown herbicide for retreatment.

4. RR volunteer corn: If crops are being rotated from RR corn to RR soybeans and a competitive flush of volunteer corn arises, Syngenta will provide $2.50 per acre toward application of Fusion® or Fusilade® DX® herbicide.

For more detailed information about terms and conditions of the 2001 Touchdown Assurance Plan, contact your local agri-chemical retailer or Syngenta representative.

Board Urges Policymakers To Bolster Ethanol

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) Corn Board conveyed the farm group's message on ethanol to top policymakers last week in Washington: Just say no to the California ethanol waiver and incorporate a renewable fuel standard in any national energy policy.

Corn Board members met with USDA Secretary Ann Veneman, EPA Administrator Christine Todd Whitman and Kyle McSlarrow, chief of staff to Energy Secretary Abraham, and senior officials of the National Economic Council at the White House. NCGA's grower leaders also met with key Hill leaders. At each meeting, the corn industry unwaveringly reiterated the farmers' support for ethanol.

NCGA believes that ethanol must remain a viable value-added product for corn farmers, and to that end the State of California's request for a waiver from the oxygenate standard must be denied. Currently, more than 100 ethanol plants nationwide are in the planning stages; unfortunately, many of these plans are on hold, due to uncertainty on the part of grower-investors of the direction of federal policy.

NCGA also asserts that any federal energy strategy must include renewable energy sources such as ethanol. Corn growers point out that corn-derived ethanol uses a domestically produced, renewable energy source that is immune to manipulation by foreign governments or cartels. And the industry can supply the volume of ethanol required by even the largest consumer states such as California, which needs an estimated 600 million gallons annually.

Crop Marketing Software Upgraded

ST. PAUL, Minn. — MARKETEER, the one-of-a-kind software specifically designed to help producers develop and implement crop marketing plans, has been upgraded by its co-developers the Center for Farm Financial Management at the University of Minnesota and Country Hedging Inc. The upgrade includes user suggested features, crop insurance analysis, and a name change to MARKETEER 2001.

"We've enjoyed tremendous success with MARKETEER," explains Bob Craven, Director of the Center for Farm Financial Management. "The acceptance of the software, both conceptually and in terms of ease of use, has been very gratifying. In fact, many farmers have told us that the software has helped them better understand various marketing opportunities and has made them more comfortable implementing a plan. The MARKETEER 2001 upgrade is the next step in creating an even more effective tool."

MARKETEER 2001 incorporates many new features. Futures Fixed and Basis Fixed Contracts have been added to round out a complete spectrum of marketing actions available for evaluation. For monitoring purposes, you can now mark when actions have been completed as you revisit the plan over the course of the year. The output has been upgraded to show a comparison between the total income generated by the marketing plan at various price levels versus a "non-plan" of cash and LDP. "On previous versions, we only looked at the per bushel effect of the plan," says Craven. "A nickel here and a dime there might not seem all that impressive until you look at how all those bushels add up."

Another addition featured in MARKETEER 2001 is an analysis of the crop insurance intended for use during the planning year. "With crop insurance being such a major part of risk management, it made sense to add a comprehensive analysis of that facet to the crop marketing plan," says Craven. "We tie the marketing tools selected for use in the preharvest section of the plan to the type and level of insurance used for that crop. Sensitivity tables are then created for projected gross revenues based on varying futures prices and yields. The program calculates at what point the insurance would kick in, and shows its contribution to gross revenue." Three-dimensional graphs are also available for a comprehensive graphical display of the sensitivity analysis.

MARKETEER requires Windows 95, 98, ME, 2000, or NT 4.0, with 32 MB of RAM, 100 MB of free hard drive space and at least a 180 MHZ Pentium processor. A 10-day trial version can be down loaded at http://www.cffm.umn.edu or call 1-800-234-1111 (Center for Farm Financial Management) or 1-800-378-5056 (Country Hedging) for more information.

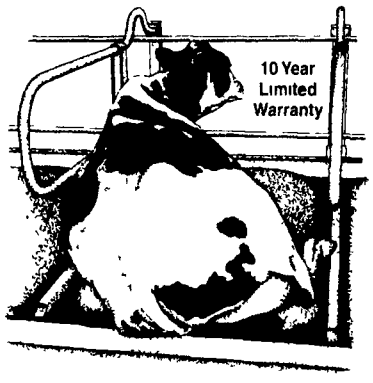
Waterbeds for Cows



ALANTA™
UniPoly

The ALANTA Waterbed for cows is a revolutionary product, comfortable, safe and hygienic. It clearly improves your cows' well-being and therefore promotes higher milk production. It is the ultimate stall floor covering for the modern, animal-friendly dairy farm.

WELL MADE
The ALANTA Waterbed is made of two rubber layers with a water-filled compartment in between. GD-Enerka gives a 10-year guarantee.

COMFORTABLE
The waterbed molds itself to the cow's shape. It's cool in summer and pleasantly warm in winter.

SAFE
Thanks to the non-slip rubber upper surface, the cow is gripped firmly and cannot slip off. In this way the ALANTA waterbed keeps damage to hooves to a minimum.

Here's What Some of Your Neighbors Say About Alanta Waterbeds:

David Bittler, Fleetwood, PA
"We are very pleased with the decision to go with the waterbeds. First calf heifers have adapted exceptionally well and are often lying down within two hours of being put in the stall"

Ichtus Farm, Lititz, PA
"I'm pleased with how the waterbeds retain their comfort over time"

Crownvetch Industry Is As Perennial As Plant Itself

Fred Grau Jr. examines a 20-year-old stand of crownvetch near State College. Crownvetch grows to about two-feet high and is an excellent ground cover.

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

PINE GROVE MILLS (Centre Co.) — Dr. Fred Grau Sr. discovered a pretty lavender-flowered cover plant along a shale pit near Virginville, Berks County, in 1935.

Little did he know that it would become one of the most sought-after ground covers for the highway department in the '60s and a sole source of business income for his son, one of only three or four major crownvetch producers in the country.

By discovering crownvetch and developing the production and marketing of the crop, Fred became the founder of the crownvetch industry.

"He didn't know what it was," said Fred Grau Jr. "He was an extension agronomist in turf at Penn State in 1935. He brought some back to Penn State and identified it. He immediately saw the erosion control use for it.

"In the late '40s and early '50s, Penn State picked up on the idea of using it. My father, Penn State, the Department of Agriculture, and the Department of Highways together conducted three years of research on crownvetch in the late '40s. Then they released it as Penngift Crown-

Seeleys' Milky Way Farm Reaps Benefits Of Grazing

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

TROY (Bradford Co.) — For the Seeley family of Milky Way Farm in Troy, the call of springtime is getting stronger and stronger every day.

It not only signals the start of a new growing season, but a shift in focus for their entire operation.

"We will rotate cows by mid-April, even though there is no grass," said Kim Seeley, who has seen his farming focus change dramatically over the years. "The reason we do that is to get the animals out of the barn. I think it's important to start grazing early just for our mentality. The cows are excited, too. They get spring fever just like we do."

Seeley's grandparents purchased the farm in 1928. In 1962, Kim's parents, Lewis and Marie, expanded the operation by building a restaurant and jugging operation. Their goal at that time was to earn enough money to put their four children through college, which they did. Kim and his wife Ann, along with their two sons — Shon, 18 and Dane, 8 — are an integral part of the operation.

For many years the Seeleys ran a conventional dairy along with their jugging operation. In fact, they hold the claim to having the oldest free-stall barn in Bradford County. After a barn fire, the Seeleys decided to move all the animals to a central location, with the milking animals in total confinement.

"We built a brand-new barn in 1976 because of a barn fire. For eight years we were in total confine-

Whole milk chocolate milk is one of the Milky Way's successes. Kim Seeley says that the whole milk and better ingredients set their product apart from the rest. The Seeleys have been operating a jugging plant since 1962.

Seeleys' Milky Way Farm

ment," said Kim.

When conventional farming methods produced wear and tear on both the animals and the operators, the Seeleys returned to their roots and started grazing again.

"(Grazing) works so perfectly for a mountain farm," Seeley said. "Trying to farm the hillsides is both ecologically not smart and economically not smart. We were totally centralized in the mid 70s. When our barn burned, we moved all of our animals into one facility.

"For 15 years all we had was trouble. It seemed like the thing to do, but now that we didn't like centralization, we've moved them all back away from the main facility. What it does is spread the nutrients around and, instead of hauling all that hay over here, we try to feed the hay right where it's grown."

One of the many challenges that the Seeleys faced when developing their rotational grazing system was Rt. 14, a major highway that runs right through their farm.

"We only have 40 acres of pasture for the milking herd and the rest of the farm is on the other side of the road, so our young stock and dry cows are on complete grass from the 15th of April until the first of December. We can do that every year, even in drought, because there's so much land, we can stockpile grass for the summer slump. Even in a drought year, like we've had for the past three out of five years, we have been able to maintain all of the dry cows and young stock on full grass every year."

The Seeleys also try to stockpile grass in the winter.

"If you have an open winter and not a lot of snow, you can actually stockpile grass and winter feed it, which is something we're constantly trying to work on," said Seeley.

On April 15, the milking cows are turned out to pasture to begin their rotations. The farm will be in full grass by the middle of May. The cows are turned out into new paddocks which range in size from one third of an acre to five acres, every 12 hours.

In order to lengthen their growing season, Seeley keeps cows on native pastures until the summer slump hits. Then cows dine on corn-sorghum mixtures through August. In September and October, the cows are back on grass.

"If we rest the pastures in August, hopefully the fall moisture will give us fall pasture," said Seeley. "The real key to make grazing work is to know when to quit grazing, not just at the end of the year but during the middle of the year. When grass growth slows, it's important to let the grass have a rest period."

There are 175 total head of cattle on the 450-acre farm. About 250 acres is tillable ground or pasture and the remainder is in woodlot. Each year the Seeleys grow about 15 acres of a corn sorghum mixture to graze and cut hay in conjunction with their rotational grazing system.

Conventional tillage is used in planting corn and sorghum, but the Seeleys don't use any herbicides on the farm.

"We cultivate. We haven't used herbicides or insecticides for 15 years," noted Seeley. "We've seen the whole farm come back to life again as far as soil microbe populations. There are challenges, too. We have to have a lot shorter rotation, but we're seeing our soil health come alive. There are long-term benefits. Too often we look at everything on a one-year basis, but our sustainability is not just our lifetime, it's many lifetimes."

Because of the jugging operation, the Seeleys need to have year-round production. During the winter months, cows are kept in the freestall operation and receive a diet of dry hay, shell corn, a protein supplement, and a small amount of corn silage.

"Because we're a direct marketer, we've got to maintain a milk flow year-round. So we're trying to supply the local market direct-marketing wise, so we still have to do some things in the winter that we probably wouldn't be doing if we were just a grass-based farm. It's kind of a tight wire that we walk to make the transition," said Seeley.

Here's Information About The FSA Pasture Recovery Program

The Pasture Recovery Program (PRP) is authorized under the provisions of section 806 of the 2001 Agricultural Appropriations Act (P. L. 106-387), according to the USDA Farm Service Agency (FSA).

The purpose of the PRP is to provide assistance to owners and operators of pastureland on which livestock is normally grazed that was damaged or destroyed by natural disaster during calendar year 2000. Owners and operators must reestablish the permanent vegetative forage crop on such pastureland to qualify for assistance under the PRP. Up to $40 million will be available under the PRP.

Sign-up will be Mar. 26 through May 11. Requests received after May 11 will not be accepted for the PRP. Producers who start the reseeding practice before completing an application for PRP payment will not be approved for payment. If the total amount of funds requested exceeds the available PRP funding, a factor will be determined and uniformly applied to all requests for payment.

The PRP will be available only in counties that are approved for the Emergency Conservation Program for emergency measures for 2000 natural disaster damage.

Land must be established pasture on which livestock are normally grazed. Pasture from which hay or silage is normally harvested is ineligible for PRP. Federal- or state-operated lands and land operated by a political subdivision of a State are not eligible. No assistance is authorized for hayland or rangeland.

Producers must own or have control over the livestock that graze the affected land and have control of the land for the contract period of 3 years to be eligible for PRP. Producers who have gross annual income in excess of $2.5 million are ineligible.

Producers must certify that the pastureland to be enrolled in PRP was so damaged or destroyed by natural disaster during calendar year 2000 that seeding is required to reestablish the forage crop.

In addition, the producer must comply with the noxious weed laws of the applicable state or local jurisdiction and control any weeds, insects, pests, and other undesirable species to ensure the establishment and maintenance of the approved forage crop.

Two conservation practices are authorized under the PRP: PRP1, Reseeding With Seedbed Preparation; and PRP2, Reseeding Without Seedbed Preparation. The seeding mixtures used in these practices are approved by the State Farm Service Agency (FSA) committee.

PRP contracts are for a three-year term. The maximum amount that a producer can earn under the PRP is $2,500 per "person." In addition, this maximum amount may be further reduced if the total amount of PRP assistance requested exceeds available funding and a factor is applied.

There are two payment rates applicable to PRP, one for each of the two authorized practices. These rates, which will be determined by the State FSA committee, will be based on 65 percent of the average cost to reseed the land. The rates may be applied statewide or by areas within the state. The maximum payment rate State FSA committees may establish is $100 per acre.

Producers will be paid upon certification and verification of the completion of the reseeding practice. All PRP payments should be made prior to Sept. 30, except in fall seeded or summer fallow areas.

PRP payments will be subject to spot checks to ensure program integrity.

Technical responsibility for the PRP is assigned to FSA.

SUCCESSFUL FORAGE CROP ESTABLISHMENT

Paul Craig, CCA
Penn State
Cooperative Extension
Extension Agent, Forages,
Dauphin County

Thick, high-yielding stands of forage grasses and legumes depend on many factors, including fertility management, weed and insect control, species and variety selection, stand management, and probably most important — successful stand establishment.

More often, mistakes made during establishment significantly hold back the potential yield of high-quality forage stands. Rarely can a new seeding be "thickened up" effectively.

Forage producers should consider all factors affecting successful stand establishment before pulling the seeder or drill out this spring.

Soil fertility management is a common mistake during stand establishment. For high yields of alfalfa, a soil pH of at least 6.7 to 6.9 is critical. Countless research and on-farm trials show the dramatic increases in yields and stand life when adequate levels of soil pH are maintained.

A soil test is the only way to accurately determine soil pH and fertility levels. Lime should be added six to 12 months prior to seeding because lime reacts slowly. Soil P and K levels also need to be monitored. Addition of fertilizers and/or manures must be made prior to seeding.

Poor weed control prior to seeding can drastically affect forage quality. Perennial weeds such as Canada thistle, quackgrass, and dandelion must be controlled. Often the best time to control these weeds is during the season prior to rotation to alfalfa or other forage crops. Many herbicide options exist for pure stands of alfalfa or grasses. Selection is reduced when legumes and grasses are mixed. Refer to the Penn State "Agronomy Guide" for control options.

Seedbed preparation is another important consideration. Conventional tilled seedbeds should provide a firm, smooth, clod free surface. Typically a drag-harrow produces a "loose" soil surface. In place of the harrow, use a cultipacker prior to seeding with a grain drill to ensure proper seed placement.

Take care to place forage grasses and legume seeds ¼- to ½-inch deep. If placed too deep, the seeds will germinate,

Herbicide-Resistant Weed Identified In First State

NEWARK, Del. — At the annual meeting of the Weed Science Society of America early in February, Dr. Mark VanGessel, cooperative extension specialist for weeds and crops at the University of Delaware (UD), announced that a weed-resistant to the herbicide glyphosate had been identified in Delaware fields.

Marestail (also known as horseweed), an annual weed that grows up to six-feet tall, is commonly found in undisturbed no-till or fallow fields, said VanGessel. He also serves as an associate professor for weed and crop management at UD College of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

"We found resistant marestail in three fields in Delaware and suspect it may be present in three or more fields here, and possibly in Maryland and New Jersey as well. This is the first report of a broadleaf plant resistant to glyphosate," he said.

According to VanGessel, the weed has appeared in fields that have been planted exclusively in herbicide-resistant soybeans. In each of these cases, burndown and over-the-top treatments of glyphosate were used for at least three years, using no other herbicides in the rotation.

"In one of these fields, I saw dead marestail plants right next to marestail that looked like nothing had happened to it," he said. "Marestail control was random throughout the field, and we were able to rule out sprayer problems or application error."

VanGessel explains that about half of all soybeans planted in the U.S. have been genetically modified to be resistant to glyphosate.

The first signs of trouble with marestail date back to the summer of 1999 when VanGessel received calls about poor performance from some growers. He received additional growei calls in 2000 and calls from Monsanto and Syngenta (the newly formed company combining Novartis agribusiness and AstraZeneca agrochemicals business).

"The companies wanted me to go with them to investigate certain fields," he said. "However, we could see no pattern that would explain the problem."

VanGessel first considered that the drought in 1999 might be the answer to the non-performance because some herbicides don't perform well under hot, dry conditions, he said. The 2000 season, however, was typical for amount of rainfall in Delaware.

"We applied 10 times the recommended rate of herbicide on the uncontrolled marestail and did not kill the weeds," said VanGessel. "We injured them, but didn't control them."

"We have since raised a second generation of marestail plants and find that these also can tolerate 10 times the recommended rates of glyphosate."

A major concern, said the specialist, is that this particular weed grows tall and its seeds are as light as dandelion seeds, and easily carried by wind. Worse yet, if the weeds are resistant, they could spread even more quickly.

VanGessel points out that certain species of plants, including marestail, develop resistance more readily than others. He is exploring the pos-but die before the growing point reaches the soil surface.

Depth control at seeding is critical. Loose soil conditions can cause problems with depth control. No-tilling can provide effective stands, but seeding depth is also critical.

Be sure to calibrate your seeder. Settings that come with the tool are only guidelines and seed size variations will certainly affect seeding rates. Refer to manuals for calibration procedures and to seed producer recommendations for seeding rates.

HORSE PASTURE MANAGEMENT

Dave Robison
Forage and Turf Agronomist
Ampac Seed Company

Horses...mighty, powerful, majestic beasts of beauty. Although we picture a robust stallion or a brood mare in a lush green pasture, such a backdrop isn't reality for many, if not most horse owners.

Most horse pastures are far less than lush. However, establishing and maintaining productive pastures isn't a difficult process. By following a few simple steps, most pastures can become lush, green, and quite productive.

The average horse needs about two acres of good pasture for grazing (per horse). So, if you own five horses, you will need 10 acres of pasture to adequately take care of their needs.

If grazing is not available, the average horse goes through about 17 pounds of forage per day (three flakes of hay), or more than 6,000 pounds of hay/forage per year.

One acre of productive grass could easily produce that amount of forage. But, on a short, thin pasture, it may take 12-15 acres to produce 6,000 pounds of forage.

Management Step #1: Fertilize

A pasture can become very

You may be asking, "What does BR mean?" BR stands for a Branched Root characteristic in alfalfa. Chemgro Seeds Paragon BR is an alfalfa with a branching root system. In tough wet conditions, Paragon BR will utilize a branching root system in poor areas. A taproot is utilized under normal conditions. BR means longer lasting stands of alfalfa in fields with less than perfect soil conditions. More of the root system stays above the water table, better securing the plant in the soil when freezing and thawing occurs. This branched rooted trait will adjust accordingly as the moisture stress intensifies. Paragon BR is a must for those uneven fields with low wet areas. Places where conventional alfalfas tend to die early, Paragon will provide you with high quality, even stand of alfalfa for a full four years. Paragon BR is a fall dormancy 3 alfalfa, with an excellent winter hardiness of 1.6. It is well adapted to the soils, conditions and diseases we face here in the Northeast.

Calves and heifers have access to pasture from a very young age. Milking cows have access to pasture from mid-April through October.

In search of a tougher cow, the Seeleys have been cross breeding for about nine years. These two calves are products of a Lineback bull.

They milk between 40 and 85 cows year-round, but have begun to selectively breed to have the largest number of milkers in the spring, summer, and fall.

Their pursuit of a fine-tuned grazing operation has also led them on a quest to find a better cow.

"We have crossbred seven breeds into the herd now," said Seeley.

The mixture includes Holstein, Jersey, Dutch Belted, Milking Shorthorn, Brown Swiss, Ayrshire, and Lineback bloodlines. They started cross-breeding their Holstein herd about nine years ago.

"We're trying to breed a tougher animal for the northern climate that needs less maintenance," he said.

In retrospect, Seeley says he would have modified his breeding strategy by using bulls two years instead of one.

"We could have extended out the breeding for 14 years, because now we've almost gone through all the breeds, so we're ready to come back around."

In the next few years, they might cross in some European breeds, leaning more to the dual-purpose breeds.

Besides breeding a tougher cow, the Seeleys have also noticed a change in their milk flavor.

"Milk flavor is not just a function of quantity, it's also a function of other things," said Seeley. "Those other breeds all bring something into that milk component structure. Now we're starting to see a difference in the flavor of the milk."

Besides operating a jugging operation, making their own ice cream and supplying several area stores, the Bradford County correctional facility and Penn College with milk, the Seeleys have also begun to market cheeses under their "Armenia Mountain" label.

"The cheesemaker always says that our milk behaves strangely," said Seeley. "And you've got to expect that."

The milk is tested monthly for quality because of the jugging operation. This spring they plan to begin testing for conjugated linoleic acid (CLA) and essential fatty acids.

"Those are really the most exciting part of the grass-fed movement right now," said Seeley. "The health implications of those components are overwhelming."

The benefits of grazing can be debated on the financial front as well.

"The biggest thing grazing has enabled us to do is recoup our depreciation. We've been able to upgrade the equipment that we need; a new round baler, a new manure spreader, a new tractor. We haven't made a lot of actual cash out of pocket, but we've been able to keep our buildings modern and looking good," said Seeley. "For the past 25 years that's the biggest thing going on in agriculture. Everybody's buildings are going downhill because they're spending everything they have to do day-to-day things."

Perhaps the biggest change the Seeleys have seen is not in cash flow or crossbreeding or making the transition to pasture, but in the quality of life — for people and cows.

"The quality of life has definitely changed when we went from conventional to grazing. We're still only six months of grazing, because of the weather, but it's just that six months that you need to change your mindset and it's something to look forward to."

Right now they are looking at ways to improve cow comfort during the winter months as well.

"We plan to maintain half of the freestall and turn the other half into a modified bedded pack just for cow comfort," said Seeley. "It's because of old age. We've never had an old-age problem before because we culled like everybody else. Now because the cows are in a lcwer stress environment, the cows are living longer. Ten- and 11-year-old cows in a freestall barn don't live well."

The Seeleys also opt not to use antibiotics on the milking herd.

"Our goal is to constantly give the cows the best immune boost we can give them," said Seeley. "Stress is ultimately probably the biggest cause of disease."

Although challenges and struggles are a part of any farming operation, Seeley is sure that the path they are on is the best one for his family.

"If we hadn't been so modern for that eight-year period, it wouldn't be so easy for me to see the other side of the fence," said Seeley. "I guess that's what makes the vision so clear in my head. My hours were much longer then and we couldn't cash-flow for eight years. Now we're seeing all the positives of changing our way of farming."

He also would encourage others to take a look around and see the potential benefits that he has found.

"Everybody's into grazing now, and grazing is important, but using the whole farm's resources is what's so important to keep more farms in the business." said Seeley. "It's not just about making the maximum amount of milk or milking the most cows, it's taking the farm and the land that you have and seeing what your pluses are and seeing what your minuses are and putting that puzzle together. We need to teach farmers to farm their own farm uniquely."

Herbicide-Resistant Weed

sibility that a genetic variation makes it more resistant than other plants.

"Here at UD we will be working with Virginia Tech to seek the mechanism for this resistance," he said. "The difference might have to do with the uptake of herbicides by the plant, or in its movement throughout the plant and into cells. Or perhaps the plant biochemically breaks down the herbicide into an inactive compound."

To date, instances of glyphosate resistance around the world can be counted on one hand. A goosegrass in Malaysia and an annual rye grass in Australia and California have been identified as resistant. Waterhemp, a weed from the Midwest, also has reduced sensitivity to glyphosate. And now, resistant marestail has been identified in Delaware.

VanGessel is unaware of a problem in controlling this weed anywhere else. He points out, however, that the resistant weeds in local fields each developed independently.

"The fields in Delaware are not in close proximity to each other."

Word is getting out about this weed, VanGessel said. He also will publish his research and post the data online at the Weed Science Society of America at http://ext.agn.uiuc.edu/wssa/.

"Our recommendation to growers is to be diligent in rotating herbicide chemistries no matter what crop they are planting."

For more information about herbicide-tolerant weeds, contact VanGessel at (302) 856-7303 or mjv@udel.edu.

Review Nutrient Plan To Avoid Risk Of Profit Loss

NORCROSS, Ga. — As we move into the 2001 growing season, it is a good idea to take another look at the crop nutrient budget for each field.

Since last fall, new soil test information may be in hand that can give a better picture of soil nutrient status, particularly any areas of fields that may be marginal in meeting crop needs for all nutrients. Remember that unless all nutrients are at optimum levels, there is a high risk of limiting yields. For example, most efficient nitrogen use depends on potassium and phosphorus supplies in the high range.

Some intended fall applications of potash and phosphate were not completed last fall. Be sure to add those in the spring to keep nutrient management plans on track. On level or gently sloping fields, take advantage of frozen ground to get fertilizer applied with the least soil compaction. Even if it means planting delays, maintaining soil nutrient levels avoids unnecessary risk. Since nutrients are basic components of yield, there is no way to produce optimum yields with sub-optimum nutrient supplies.

Have crop plans changed? Shifting plans for a field from soybeans to corn, for example, may mean a need to adjust fertilizer application plans from what was intended last fall. If final 2000 yields were higher than expected, adjust fertilizer application to account for higher crop removal. Don't shortchange the next crop.

Review research reports. New information from university and industry sources may provide guidance in fine-tuning nutrient plans. Check with your dealer, your extension office, and various Internet Websites for the latest information.

Review plans with your dealer and crop adviser. They may have gained some new information from winter training sessions that will be important to your situation. Most dealers and crop advisers attend a series of update sessions each winter to stay in tune with latest research and recommendations. They are part of your management decision "team," so take advantage of their support.

Review the short-term and long-term. Don't interrupt progress toward soil test and yield goals. Often these plans take several years to implement and must bridge weather, yield, and market cycles. A good plan implemented systematically is the best approach to reaching those goals and maintaining profitability.

If spring weather patterns result in a tight schedule for planting, plans may need to be adjusted again. If potassium and phosphorus soil tests are high, you may be able to delay applications with minimal risk. But be sure to adjust plans for next season accordingly. If soil tests are medium or below, there is a much higher risk of reduced yields if the fertilizer is not applied. It is important to provide the needed nutrients.

For nitrogen, cutting back or delaying application poses a higher risk. While it may be possible to get by with a slightly lower rate when applied in spring, the option of not applying nitrogen doesn't exist. It is also important to review weather since fall applications were made to determine whether nitrogen losses would be expected. If nitrogen was applied before soil temperatures cooled down, or if fall through spring rainfall has been unusually high, there may be a need for supplemental nitrogen application.

Crownvetch Industry

The field on the Gift Farm in Virginville became known as, in seed research industry terms, the "breeders' source." Penn State researchers planted these seeds to form the foundation fields. The seed from the foundation fields was planted on fields to produce certified seed, which became available to the public.

Grau Sr. bought a farm between Pine Grove Mills and State College in the late '30s. It's here that his son continues the business of growing and marketing crownvetch.

"We have 60 acres of crownvetch-producing acres here, but Pennsylvania is a poor place to produce seed. Crownvetch grows well here, but the summers are too humid, cloudy, and rainy for producing seed. You need to shut the water off when the plants blossom. Most of our seed is produced out west under irrigation, where we can control the moisture."

Grau purchased a farm in Colorado in 1977. He sells his crownvetch seed to seed companies wholesale. He doesn't even sell directly to the Department of Transportation (DOT).

"The '60s, when the interstate system was being built, was the boom time for crownvetch. There were hundreds of growers in the United States and dozens in Pennsylvania. Everyone was making money. We used to think we'd live or die by DOT. It's still in demand by DOTs as a landscaping cover plant, but now seed companies sell much of it in one-pound packs as a low maintenance, aesthetic, effective, and permanent ground cover. It's a true perennial. We have fields here in Pine Grove Mills that were planted in the '40s and are still thriving. They've never been replanted."

Crownvetch grows to about two feet high. The thick cover above ground forms excellent erosion protection while the massive root system holds soil in place and increases soil tilth. The beneficial bacteria associated with the roots produce the nitrogen in a form available to the plants — such as corn, suggested Grau.

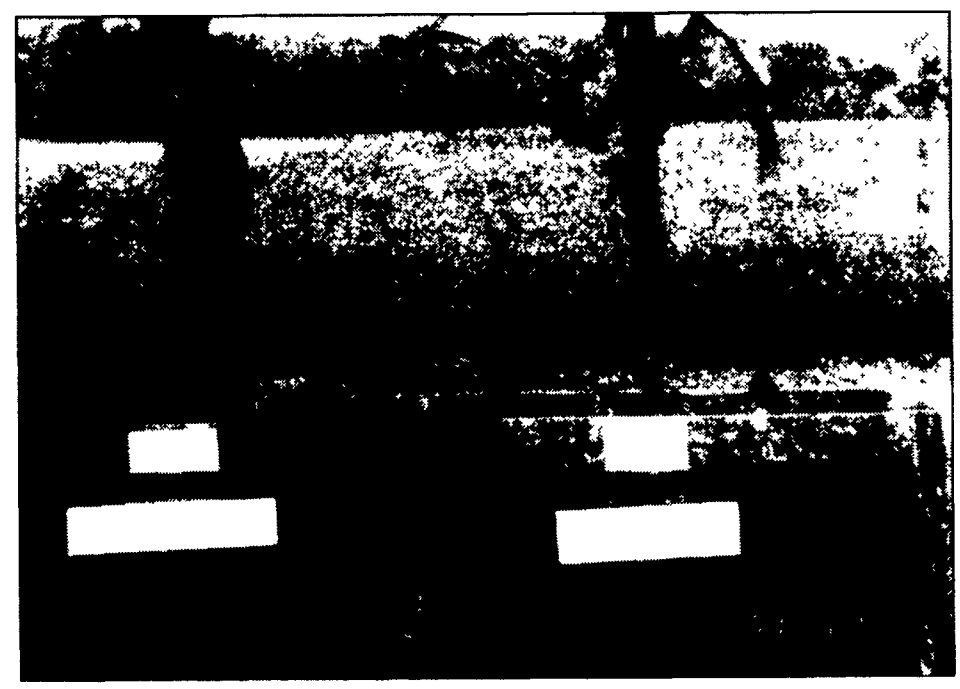
"The advantage of planting no-till corn in crownvetch goes beyond the measurable. There's maybe 50 pounds of nitrogen per acre you don't have to buy," Grau said. "When you get a canopy of corn, the crownvetch is not in competition with the corn."

Grau suggests planting the crownvetch and corn at the same time. Then, no-till the corn into the crownvetch the following years and manage the corn appropriately, getting careful advice on herbicides. It takes about two years to form a good stand of crownvetch.

"Planting corn into crownvetch has been around since the 1970s. Dr. Nathan L. Hartwig, now retired from Penn State, spent his career perfecting it. It's a very successful program. It just hasn't caught on."

Because crownvetch has been commercially available for 50 years, it has proven itself as an excellent heat-, cold-, and drought-resistant, soil-building, and erosion-control ground cover. As for the future, Grau knows crownvetch is here to stay.

Demonstrations at Ag Progress Days show the soil-building advantages of planting crownvetch with corn.



It took only three seconds for crownvetch-covered soil to absorb water. The bare no-till soil absorbed the same amount of water in 80 seconds.

Horses Thrive On High-Quality Alfalfa Hay

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — More myths are associated with feeding horses than with most other animals. In part, this may be because of lack of current research information on equine feeding and nutrition.

In addition, many horse owners may have little agricultural experience and may be owning a large animal for the first time. Both art and science are involved in properly feeding a quality race, draft, performance, or pleasure horse.

Less than two decades ago, "horse hay" meant dry, dust-free, sweet smelling, mature grass hay. Horses fed high quality alfalfa hay were thought to slobber, develop damaged kidneys, have increased urine output and, generally, not thrive. Current research has proven these previous myths to be false.

"The horse is a difficult animal to feed properly because of how its stomach is constructed and used," said Dr. Neal Martin, U.S. Diary Forage Research Center, USDA-ARS, Madison, Wis. "In contrast to ruminant animals, horses have a single, comparatively small stomach with limited capacity and a rapid rate passage for feed."

The horse's stomach also is incapable of tolerating mold or dust without possible digestive disturbances as well as colic or heaves. Horses cannot effectively use low-quality hay that is high in fiber because it stays in the digestive tract too long. A premium is placed on high quality alfalfa hay.

By purchasing pure, early-cut alfalfa hay, horse owners can mix alfalfa with high quality grass hay to regulate protein levels for the various types of animals, without changing their grain mixture.

"Early-cut and high quality alfalfa hay has unquestionably been the best forage the horse enthusiast can use," Martin said.

Well, another season of grazing conferences in Pennsylvania has come and gone.

I was just reflecting on one of the sessions I moderated at the Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference in Grantville. The session was entitled "Animal Health/ Biosecurity" and the speakers were Dr. David Wolfgang, Penn State Extension veterinarian and Alan Kozak, a dairy farmer from Ohio.

Wolfgang spoke first and discussed general biosecurity and biocontainment practices that a farmer should be using. He also talked about several diseases and infectious agents of which farmers should be concerned, including salmonella, Johne's disease, hairy heel warts, and several others.

Most everyone, including myself, did not take Wolfgang's excellent message all that seriously, but the next speaker changed our outlook on the subject.

It was Kozak's turn to come to the podium and his discussion was to revolve around his experience with Johne's disease on his farm. His talk started out rather routinely with a general discussion about his farm and his herd. Then he turned his discussion to Johne's disease and its establishment in the herd. His talk picked up intensity as he discussed the advancement of Johne's in his own herd. When he reached the point in his discussion where he talked of losing 38 cows in a six-month period, he could only keep his composure by becoming silent.

I will quote Alan as he talks about this horrific experience.

"There were several different times that we loaded five or more cows on the same day. Once there were even seven. There were several people that would haul the cattle, but we chose a fellow who helped on his family's Jersey dairy. He had some compassion for the situation and seemed to understand my wet eyes as we loaded another group of what were promising young cattle."

The room was silent and everyone of the 50+ people in the audience were in suspense because of Alan's gripping message. His compassion and concern for his prized cows was very evident, but at this point, the disease was in control and winning. He had to change this quickly or he would be out of business.

While he was being careful, he had done most everything wrong that he could have. He listed for us the "stupid things that we have done." As I looked at his list, I saw things that most farmers do routinely. It absolutely scared me.

A few things he listed:

- Walked across cow lanes to feed calves.
- Grazed heifers behind the cows.
- Mixed feed with same skid loader the barn was cleaned with.
- Spread liquid manure on the pastures.
- Mowed heifer pastures with the same manure-splattered tractor and mower that was used in cow pastures.
- Thought our vet knew enough to give sound advice about Johne's.

He listed several other things as well.

Alan outlined 18 points in his Johne's control program that he has now instituted to get ahead of this disease. He believes he has turned the tide, because he has only lost eight cows to Johne's in 2000. Alan's advice to all livestock producers:

- Know the Johne's status of your herd.
- If Johne's is found, implement a control plan with the help of your local and/or state veterinarians.
- If your herd is Johne's-free, continue annual testing because cattle from clean herds will bring a premium in a market that is becoming more aware of Johne's.

If everyone in that audience did not sit up and take home a message about the seriousness of biosecurity, they must have slept through two excellent presentations.

At the time we planned the conference, we didn't realize how timely this topic would be. The world livestock industry is monitoring the problems the United Kingdom is experiencing with foot and mouth disease (FMD). I was at a recent hearing that the Pennsylvania House of Representatives Agriculture Committee on FMD and bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE), commonly called "mad cow disease." I heard Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Sam Hayes list his plans for dealing with these se-

Pennsylvania Forage Production For 2000

Based on year-end acreage and yield data, production of alfalfa and other hay was above last year's production in Pennsylvania, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service (PASS). This is Pennsylvania's first year in the forage estimating program.

Alfalfa forage was harvested from 830,000 acres with an average yield of 4.17 tons per acre, resulting in total alfalfa forage production of 3.46 million tons. Alfalfa haylage and greenchop production was 2.92 million tons.

Acres harvested were 430,000, with an average yield of 6.80 tons per acre. Alfalfa dry hay production was 2.02 million tons, 20 percent above last year's production.

Acres harvested were 650,000, with a yield of 3.10 tons per acre.

Alfalfa acres newly seeded in 2000 for crop production in 2001 totaled 130,000 acres, down 5,000 acres from a year ago. All other dry hay acres harvested totaled 1.15 million acres, which yielded 2.10 tons per acre for a total production of 2.42 million tons, up 44 percent from last year.

Acreage for all forage production totaled 2 million, with an average yield of 3.17 tons per acre resulting in total forage production of 6.35 million tons. Haylage and greenchop was harvested from 62,000 acres, with an average yield of 6.25 tons per acre for a total production of 3.87 million tons.

rious issues if they reach U.S. shores. With the rapid spreading ability of FMD, immediate disposal is the only answer. Think about your situation and how this would affect you and your farming enterprise. Costs could be very high and could even mean severe economic hardship.

Consider the issue of biosecurity on your farm. Are you taking precautions to keep diseases from coming onto your farm or from leaving your farm? Remember Alan's situation and continued problems in deadline with Johne's. Perhaps you need to have a disinfectant station available for visitors coming onto your farm. Perhaps you will prevent visitors from coming onto your farm without knowing where they have been within the past week.

The USDA announced that efforts to prevent the importation of FMD and BSE to the U.S. have been stepped up. Inspections at ports of entry have been increased and a ban on all importation of swine and ruminant animal products is in effect.

The virus for FMD can live in a human respiratory system for up to five days, although it is not a threat to human health. It can survive on contaminated clothing for 10 to 12 weeks. According to some sources, FMD can live in dry manure for 14 days, in slurry manure for 39 days, in urine for 39 days, and on the soil surface for three days in the summer (if conditions are cool and moist, for up to 28 days). There is documentation that the virus has traveled airborne for 156 miles. Is this serious? You bet it is, because the disease spreads very easily and rapidly.

The public, particularly the traveling public, needs to be educated on how they can be a carrier of this disease. The USDA has instituted such an educational campaign, but we all need to do our part to help pass the word along. We all have a vested interest in preventing an outbreak in the U.S.

The season for pasture walks, field days, and other informational meetings on the farm is just about to get under way. Let's plan appropriate biosecurity measures now to avoid any problems later on.

There are many sources of information on biosecurity, such as USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service's Website, http://www.aphis.usda.gov/vs/ceah/cahm/; Penn State Cooperative Extension; or The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

If you need more information on this or other grazing issues, stop by any of our local county NRCS offices and discuss your needs with them.

If I can help you in any way, give me a call at (717) 237-2221, e-mail me at duane.pysher@pa.usda.gov, or write to me at NRCS, One Credit Union Place, Suite 340, Harrisburg, PA 17110-2993.

Until next time, happy grazing!

VICON'S KMR Trailed Mower Conditioners

A superb cut with excellent conditioning performance. Available in 7'10", 9'2", 10', 10'6" and 12'6" widths, Vicon is once again "Bringing Technology down to earth."

• Full swivel hitch - PTO stays in alignment when cutting square corners.
• "Free Float" suspension system - With 16" of free stroke in operating position, the cutterbar follows uneven ground and clears obstacles. The center hinge point also permits the mower unit to raise or lower at either side without adding excess pressure on the opposite side. The high-lift design gives swath clearance at headlands.

* Wedge shaped cutterbar - Less ground resistance, eliminates "bulldozing" in soft ground conditions, and allows for a lower cutting height when needed.
* 3 Blades per disc - Vicon's patented design puts 1/3 less load on each blade and an even load on the drive train.
* Top service hubs on cutterbar - Easy Maintenance.
* Labyrinth seals - A specially designed labyrinth seal on the hub of each disc prevents dirt, moisture, and all foreign material from entering.
* Full protected cutterbar - Cutterbar is supported completely with an extra shell and additional wear strips. A reinforcement rod stiffens the cutterbar to prevent flexing.
* Segmented intermeshing fully adjustable conditioning rolls.
* Adjustable formed swath doors for fluffy, easy to pick-up windrows.

Graziers Learn 'Maximum Management' Techniques At Conference

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Careful management, agreed speakers at the Southeast Pennsylvania Grazing Conference in February, is the key to a successful, profitable grassland operation.

The conference brought together producers and speakers to exchange ideas during the two-day event at the Solanco fairgrounds.

In its eighth year, the conference attracted approximately 200 people for the educational event sponsored by the Lancaster County Graziers.

Each speaker reinforced the theme, "maximizing management," with their own ideas and experiences on effectively managing a grazing operation.

Cove Mountain Farm

Glen Moyer, Cove Mountain Farm, Mercersburg, Franklin County, chose to try operating a grass-based farm because of financial reasons. Previously farming on a "retrofitted grass farm" for 10 years, in 1996 Moyer took up the challenge to develop seasonal dairy farm from the ground up on a farm willed to American Farmland Trust. Of the farm's 300 acres, 200 are in grass.

Bordered by the Tuscarora Mountains, the farm in southwest Franklin County includes rolling grounds, a variety of soil types, and the sizable Cove Creek.

Moyer himself completed the stallwork, "quite a fun project," on the barn that also has sliding panels for ventilation and sunlight plus translucent panels and a skylight for light purposes. Last year Moyer and his family milked 118 cows.

On the grazing operation, "all the calves are born on the ground, hopefully not in the snow," said Moyer. "The toughest time of calving is when it's wet. The calves must be picked up and taken to a warmer climate within an hour or we basically lose the calf. It's like being dropped into an ice bath — it just sucks the life out of them."

Not Black And White

Having begun with registered Holsteins, Moyer was introduced to the Jersey breed by a neighbor and over time has added Jerseys to his crossbreeding program. "We're definitely into color. It's not all black and white."

The fencing is single, 16-gauge high-tensile wire on ⅝ inch corner posts and ⅜ inch support posts. Old drums hold water for the paddocks, however "as the herd grows we find we need the 100-gallon tanks," he said.

To make a lane for the cows, he topped an old diversion terrace with loose gravel. Moyer feeds his herd round bales with an unroller.

Cove Mountain Farm weathered a tough lesson and was introduced to its "number one challenge" with an endophyte fescue problem. Irrigating the pasture too late, said Moyer, allowed the fescue to grow while leaving other plants dormant.

The endophyte problem, estimates Moyer, has affected production, body condition, and even reproductive efficiency.

The seasonal setup means that the Moyer family milks from approximately early March to early or middle January.

Additional information on grass-based farming systems and Cove Mountain Farm is available at Grassfarmer.com.

The Strite Family

Pastoring a church and raising four homeschooled boys helped to put Harry Strite, Williamsport, Md., on a mission for a lower-stress, less time-intensive way to farm.

After farming with his father since 1972, Strite took over in 1995. A grazing conference inspired the Strite family and helped them to decide to move to an all-grass setup.

"We came home from the grazing conference in 1997 with goals," said Strite. The pace toward moving to a grass-based operation moved even faster than expected, however, and the Strites exceeded the goals set and put all their land in grass in two years and went seasonal in four years.

"We made sure to make new goals," he said. "We've made progress but we're not satisfied with where we're at."

At the Strite farm, they do not feed grain and are now feeding stockpiled fescue, also with an unroller, to his cattle housed on the pasture. "And come spring, the manure's all hauled," he said.

SOIL POTASSIUM MANAGEMENT FOR DRY COW FORAGES

Mark Goodson, CCA
Soils
York County

According to News and Views from the Potash and Phosphate Institute (August 1995), dairy nutritionists recognize that a transition diet of pregnant dry cows three to six weeks prior to calving is crucial to avoid milk fever and subclinical hypocalcemia.

The optimum dietary cation-anion difference (DCAD) for dry cows is different than for lactating cows. Potassium (K) plays a major role in the DCAD. Over the past 15 years, concentrations of forage K have been increasing.

K concentrations in haylages are considerably higher than those in hay. This is because K is more likely to be lost to leaching by rain from hay than from haylage. Also, the fermentation process involves loss of dry matter without the loss of K. Corn silage has far less K than hay or haylage.

Optimum levels of soil K are essential of persistence of legumes and ensuring optimum yields of both grass and legume forages. Most forages produced with optimum K fertility will not contain excessive K for a lactating cow diet, but there could be a problem when used for the dry cow diet. Produce separate forage for the dry cow. Achieve this by withholding K fertilization even though this may hold yields below 80 percent of those with non-limiting levels of K.

It is important to know the level of soil K in each forage production field. Fields testing lowest in soil K can be set aside for producing forage for dry cows during the transition phase. A regular soil-testing program, with sampling every two to three years, is essential.

Low K forage can be produced on five to 10 percent of total forage acreage. Produce the low K forage on small acreage with a below optimum soil test for K.

Avoid all forms of K fertilization, including manure. Over time, since forage removal of K is high, the soil test level will decline to the point where economic production of forage without replacement of K is not possible. At that point, application of controlled amounts of K fertilizer could resume. Research is needed to determine the precise recommendation of applied K to produce forages of a desired K level.

The concentration of K in plant tissue declines as the plant matures. Therefore, a dry cow forage grass should not be cut early. Weathering, particularly rain on hay during drying may reduce the amount of K in forage. Since K in plant tissue is in a soluble form, it could easily be leached from drying hay by rain. Hay is less likely to have high K than silage.

When soil K levels are high, higher rates of nitrogen fertilizer will increase forage K concentration. Phosphorus fertility is important to ensure optimal plant uptake of magnesium and calcium, cations important in the prevention of milk fever.

Graziers Learn 'Maximum Management'

Besides the Ayrshires, Strite's crossbreeding program includes Holsteins, Normandes and Dutch Belt cattle. The "rainbow herd" also includes New Zealand genetics and even Guernsey and Jersey cattle, besides recently-purchased Linebacks.

In addition, "we decided to raise bull calves after two calves out of twenty were heifers last year."

Polywire and stakes allow them to put their fence virtually anywhere. Barrel feeders feed whole milk to the calves.

The Calf-Mobile

Once the calves are big enough to go out on a pasture, they are introduced to the "calf-mobile."

Inspired by the "chicken-mobile," this setup, 50 feet square, is constructed of two-by-fours and 15-gallon barrels.

The boards are spliced and bolted to the barrel, then the fence is pulled along on barrels twice a day. Ropes hook to the corners, middle, and back in four places to allow movement in all directions.

"The calves line up at the front and walk along because they know they're moving on to fresh grass and grain," explained Strite. A lead wire attached to the fence makes the polywire hot and keeps the calves in check. "It's all very portable," he said.

Also in Strite's pasture is a solar-powered water system. Working with the Natural Resource Conservation Service, the Strites put in two 75-watt panels to pump water into a main 3,600-gallon tank, which flows to other tanks on the property. Although the system is ideal during long sunny days, Strite is finding it difficulty to keep the batteries charged during cloudy days.

To take care of mineral needs, barrels of salt and kelp are loaded on a skid and moved from paddock to paddock.

A steel-reinforced concrete bridge, eight feet wide, constitutes a stream crossing for the cattle and Strite's small tractor.

When the endophyte-free fescue went into head in Strite's pasture, he tried clipping six inches off. The cows, instead of avoiding it as they would do if it were standing, ate the fescue, and Strite could save on baling.

A four-foot-high chicken-mobile, made from an old frame from a manure spreader, also has a home on the farm. Strite's sons are in charge of selling the eggs.

Laneway construction consists of geo-textile fabric with a layer of stones or lime, spread with a manure spreader, over top. Shingle tabs are ideal, he said, but are also hard to purchase because of high demand.

Strite can irrigate all 100 acres of grass.

The Strites milk 90 cows and work two farms with a total of 300 acres. Approximately 170 of the acres are in grass, with the rest in woods.

The Forgey Farm

Dave Forgey milks 130 New Zealand Holstein-Friesan crossbred cattle on his seasonal grazing operation in Logansport, Ind. An experienced grazier, Forgey's land has been in grass for 10 years.

After hearing about rotational grazing, his interest was piqued and he went on to learn about putting the land into grass. He attributes grass farming as the factor that saved his operation from debt and kept Forgey in the dairy business.

"We have seen a dramatic change since we've converted to seasonal production," he said as he pointed out the decrease in debt ratio from conventional to grazing production.

"This kind of a system, if you've been at it at all, takes a mindset change. It can't be done from the seat of a tractor or from the office," he said.

Watching costs is key, emphasized Forgey. "You need to know the cost of production to realize the advantages of grazing. Cost control is the easiest way to profit.

"Get out of the old mode of spending money you don't have to," he said.

"Question every expense; make sure it's a justifiable cost. Most of our inputs are lime and seed. Beyond that there's not much added to the farm.

"People are willing to look at new technology rather than a new system," he said. "Step outside the box. Put profit per unit over production per unit."

Also look at environmental impact, he said. Animal wastes are spread evenly and held in place with growing forages for improved water quality.

Genetics in the pasture system, he said, will probably change as a producer moves from conventional to an all-pasture, seasonal system.

"If it's working, stick with your system," he said. "I think that's the most critical thing you can do. Some have used so many different breeds they don't know what is working," he warned.

'Sharemilking'

Forgey also detailed his "sharemilking" agreement with a younger dairy farmer. This system affords the opportunity for young people to get involved in the dairy industry with less debt and enables older dairymen to chance to slow down and yet stay involved.

Forgey's business partner began by purchasing springing heifers, which Forgey leased back until the debt was paid and the sharemilking agreement began.

In sharemilking, he said, the landowner is responsible for harvesting, major repairs and maintenance, and providing equipment and management assistance.

The sharemilker provides daily herd management, takes the milking and calf raising responsibilities, and provides pasture management and day-to-day maintenance.

The agreement, which also divides up the expenses and milk sales accordingly, creates a true subcontracting, instead of an employee, situation.

Forgey said, "the dairy industry is rapidly changing. Pasture systems provide a way to stay competitive today."

The Mite That Roared!

Paul H. Craig
Capital Region Extension
Agronomy Team, Forages
Dauphin County

Pennsylvania hay producers have developed a very profitable hay market for timothy grass hay. Timothy hay is the favored species of grass hay for most horse producers throughout the state and neighboring states.

It has been estimated that there are about 175,000 acres of timothy in Pennsylvania and 75,000 acres in Maryland. Recent hay prices range from $75 to $165 per ton for timothy hay.

At top production levels and price, timothy can gross $500 per acre or more. In recent years, however, many timothy producers have noted decreased yields and thinning stands across south central Pennsylvania.

In the spring of 2000, the cause for this reduction of stands was identified as a new pest in Pennsylvania, the cereal rust mite. Travels across south central Pennsylvania revealed that the problem is widespread and that most stands of timothy more than two 2-years-old have some level of infestation of the cereal rust mite, commonly, but incorrectly, referred to as the timothy mite.

The cereal rust mite is an extremely small pest. It cannot be seen without the use of a 20-power hand lens or a microscope. They are shaped like a grain of rice, soft bodied, with four legs located near the head of this critter. They can move fairly easily up and down the leaves of the timothy plant, but they prefer to feed on the youngest tissue of the plant.

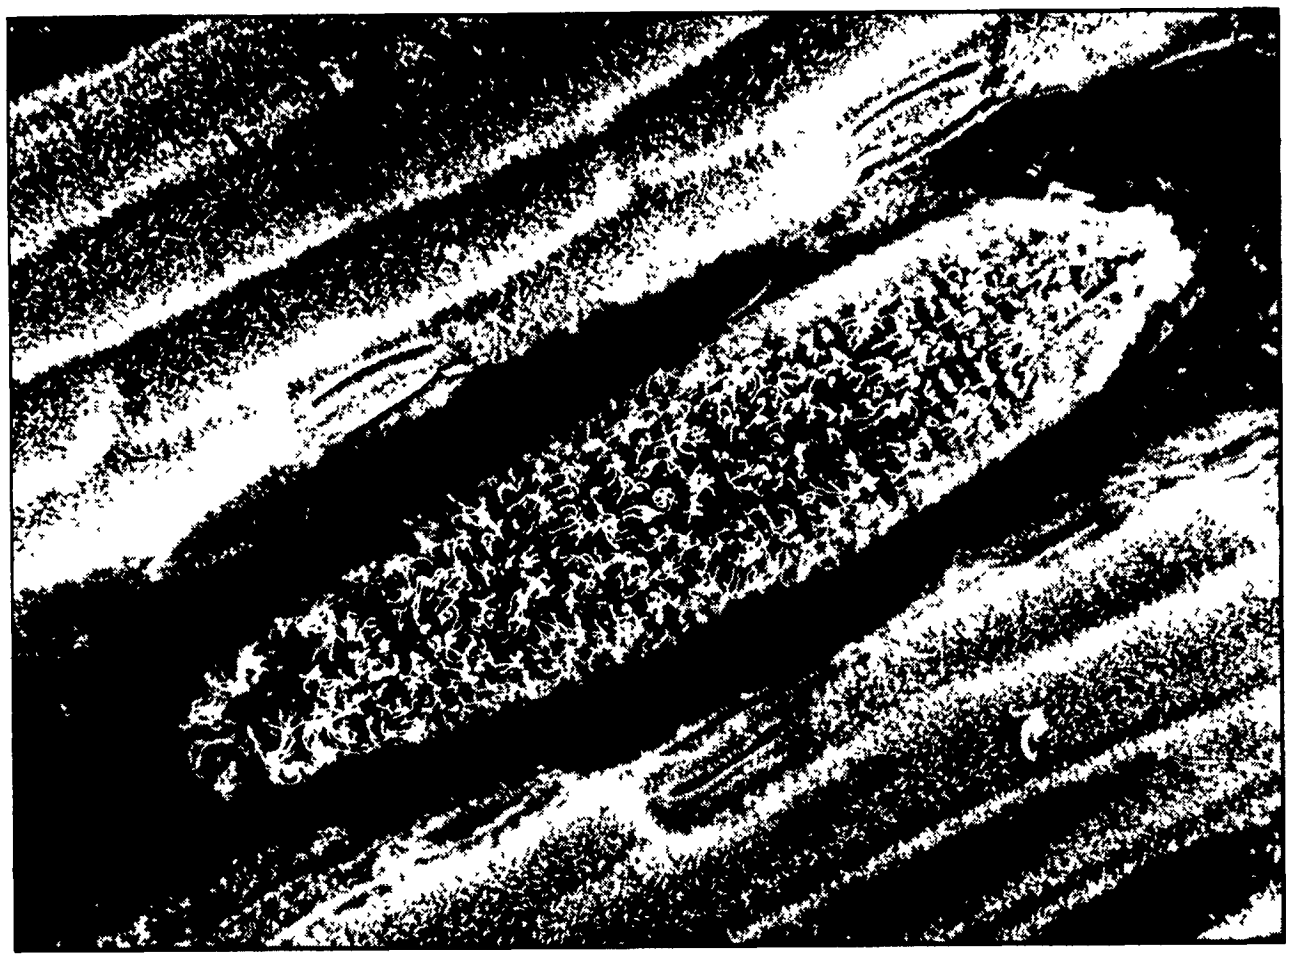
Don't let the size of this pest lull you into indifference. High population levels can be very destructive to timothy stands.

The cereal rust mite feeds on single cells at the base of the grooves between veins on the timothy leaves. The mite inserts a "needle-like" mouthpart into the cell and draws out the cell contents, leaving a shrunken cell. The mite then moves to another cell and resumes feeding. Very rapidly, the plant displays a "rolled leaf" characteristic that is very similar to drought stress. The tip off to an infestation is the droughty symptom seen in late April or early May when adequate soil moisture is available.

Severe mite infestations have two negative impacts for timothy producers. Severe feeding causes substantial yield losses. Yield loss estimates range from 30 to 70 percent. Severe feeding has resulted in stressed stands that are not able to withstand extreme summer growing conditions, especially droughts and high temperatures. As a result, older stands can be severely thinned out.

A second impact of the mite is related to forage quality. Under high mite pressures, the hay cures with a brownish discoloration. This "off color" makes horse producers reluctant to pay top dollar.

In the mid 1990s, this pest was first brought to the attention of forage researchers at the University of Maryland. Entomologists Galen Dively and Terry Patton quickly noted the widespread occurrence in western Maryland and initiated small research trials to evaluate control materials and to gain additional knowledge on the mite.



The cereal rust mite is almost microscopic in size.

In the spring of 2000, ag service representatives in southern Pennsylvania informed members of the Penn State University Capital Region Extension Agronomy Team of the possible spread of this pest into Pennsylvania. In travels across the region the pest has been noted from western Franklin County to eastern Lancaster County and north to upper Dauphin County.

Unlike most crop pests, the cereal rust mite prefers colder conditions to summer weather. The mites overwinter in the crown area of timothy plants as adults and eggs. Maryland has recorded breeding activity as early as January. Each female can lay 20 to 40 eggs that rapidly reach maturity in 16-18 days. As a result, populations rapidly increase. As the leaves on the plant elongate the mature mites will move out on the leaves and then "stand up" on their tails. They are then dispersed by winds. The mites have such a great preference for timothy that if they land on a different species of plant, they will stand up and move again.

By mid April, mite populations are rapidly building up and this is the time when injury can first be noted. By May, signs of heavy feeding can be noted by looking for the droughted characteristic. When summer temperatures arrive, the mite enters a dormancy period and is rarely observed on regrowth.

Growers of timothy forage crops should begin to monitor their stands productive if the plants are fed. When comparing feed costs to maintaining a fertile, productive pasture, a few dollars spent on soil nutrients is a wise investment. Your cheapest feed is under your horse's hooves.

PFGC ❖ INDUSTRY CORNER ❖

Before fertilizing, have soil samples taken to determine the pH of the soil and the levels of phosphorous and potassium. (Note: Some horses are prone to a genetic condition called HYPP, which is triggered by potassium excess. Other conditions may be caused by soil imbalances as well.) Have a reputable fertilizer dealer or extension agent evaluate your soil samples and recommend the best fertilizer for your pastures.

Since horse pastures consist mainly of grasses, nitrogen applications will be very helpful. Generally it is best to apply up to 150 pounds of nitrogen over three applications. For most regions this means 50 pounds of N in early spring, again in late May or early June, and finally again in September. Also, early December is an excellent time for a late fall application to stimulate tillering. It is one of the best treatments for an overgrazed pasture. Fertilizer applications will ensure ample grass production all season long, keeping your pastures healthy and prolific.

Management Step 2: Practice Rotational Grazing

Every pasture needs a break to regrow, recover, and be fertilized. This can be accomplished easily by breaking a pasture into two or more subpastures, using either temporary or permanent fencing.

Ideally, horses should be rotated from one pasture to another when the pasture is grazed down three- to four-inches and the next pasture has grown to at least six- to eight-inches. In the spring there may be too much forage growing for the horses to keep up with. If so, the number of acres being grazed needs to be reduced, made into hay, or mowed off.

In contrast, summer rotations will be longer, and supplemental hay feeding may be needed. The more a pasture can be divided, the easier it will be to manage. Portable fencing can be very helpful for pasture subdivisions.

Management Step #3: Keep the Pasture Clipped

Even if you are managing your pasture well, you may still have times when the pasture gets too long, or certain plants remain uneaten. Not only do horses have a "close nipping" eating habit, but they are also very selective of what and where they graze. This causes some of the pasture to be overgrazed, while the rest is undergrazed.

Keeping the pasture clipped will help reduce this problem and keep the whole pasture in the vegetative, edible stage. Use the easiest, most efficient way available to mow down the tall grass, weeds, and undesirable plants. Spot spraying with a selective herbicide can also be helpful for weed control.

Management Step #4: Overseed When Applicable

Even good pastures thin out over time. New seed should be added annually to ensure that your pastures produce good grass. Existing grasses may reseed themselves, but they probably won't be the ones you, or your horses are looking for. Naturally, the weeds will easily reseed and spread. Don't wait until the weeds take over. Be proactive and regularly add quality forage seeds.

The best time to overseed is either fall or spring. Fall is preferable because the weed pressure will be less. Ideally you should "scratch" or disturb the surface enough to ensure good seed-to-soil contact. Sometimes spring is too muddy to harrow or let animals trample "hoof seed."

In parts of the country where the ground freezes, a simple way to add new plants to your pasture is to "frost seed." This is accomplished by overseeding when the frost is still on the ground (usually in early March). All you'll need is a broadcast spreader and seed. Red and Ladino clovers and some grasses (especially ryegrasses) are well adapted to this practice. (Note: Avoid using Alsike Clover. It has caused horses to die from "dew poisoning.") Cool, wet spring conditions will allow for germination and growth of the seed.

A newly treated pasture must be handled carefully. The seedlings will not tolerate grazing until approximately six weeks after they have emerged. When choosing seed for new pastures or for renovating existing pastures, always choose an improved, endophyte-free and alkaloid-free variety. When selecting your seed species, research Websites such as www.pasture-perfect.com to find out what species and varieties will work best for you. University forage experts, extension agents, and vendors can also be very helpful. Mixes from Ampac Seed Company were formulated especially for this purpose.

Horses are tough on pastures, but with proper management, basic "horse-sense" and patience, you can enjoy a successful and productive horse pasture. Horses are beautiful animals, and even more so when they are grazing in lush, beautiful pastures.

PFGC ❖ PRESIDENT'S CORNER ❖

Duane E. Pysher
Grassland Management Specialist
Natural Resources
Conservation Service
Harrisburg

I am Duane Pysher, newly elected president of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC) for 2001-2002.

I am pleased and excited to have been elected president of this outstanding organization.

For the past 34 years, I have been employed by the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service and have worked in several different counties across Pennsylvania.

My position is the grassland management specialist for Pennsylvania. I assumed this position nine years ago after completing my master's degree and research on intensive rotational grazing of dairy cows on 22 varieties of cool-season grasses at Penn State.

I was born and raised on a dairy farm in Northampton County and have had roots in agriculture my whole life. I have resided in Wernersville, Berks County for the past 22 years.

The Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council's membership represents producers, agri-industry representative, and educators with an interest in Pennsylvania's forage industry. This unique membership gives members or farmers the opportunity to network with representatives from all segments of the forage industry. This is a great help in conducting programs for its members that meet membership needs.

As your new president, I say your input on activities is crucial if we are to meet your expectations. If you have ideas on what PFGC should be doing or offering to members, please let me or another board member know. If you are not a member and would like to become one, I will be happy to provide you with membership materials and an application.

Remember, this is your organization, and if it is to become even better, we need everyone's ideas on how to do that. You can contact me at NRCS, Suite 340, One Credit Union Place, Harrisburg, PA 17110-2993. My e-mail address is duane.pysher@pa.usda.gov and my telephone number is (717) 237-2221.

I look forward to working with your during the year.

The Mite That Roared!

of timothy for this pest. Scouting procedures have not been fully developed, but producers can collect representative samples from across their field. Hand lenses are available from most camera stores or mail order catalogs. A minimum of 20 power is recommended.

Costs for a good lens is less than $25. Look for the mite on the surface side of the youngest leaves.

Immature and adult mites are similar in shape, like a "rice kernel." Eggs can be seen in many cases.

The egg resembles an extremely small, round ball and will be evident across the leaf surface. Most mites and eggs will be seen in between the veins on the leaf. Remember that because of population dynamics, a few mites can rapidly develop into an economic problem. If you do not have access to a hand lens, look for curled tips on the newest leaf blades following spring green up.

Until this spring, there was no effective control product available for use on timothy to control the mite. With the support of Penn State University and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, a supplemental label use, called a "24© was granted for Pennsylvania timothy producers to use Sevin XLR as a temporary solution for the cereal rust mite.

Label directions call for the use of two to three pints per acre of Sevin LXR with adequate carrier for complete coverage of the timothy — a minimum of 20 gallons per acre. Treatment is recommended approximately four weeks after green up to fields with a past history of mite infestation or when 25 percent of plant tillers exhibit curled tips.

Application is restricted to one time per cutting and must be made at least 30 days prior to harvest. Follow all application directions and safety requirements.

Research is continuing into alternative control methods. Suggestions include flaming, burn-down herbicides, timing of fall harvest, and possibly new miticides. Investigation into possible timothy variety resistance was established this spring in Maryland. Scientists are monitoring population dynamics very closely in an effort to learn more about this new pest. Early Harvest Is Essential In Making Dairy-Quality Grass Hay

Marvin Hall
Forage Specialist

The use of perennial grasses for high-quality dairy feed throughout much of Pennsylvania is common. Unfortunately, the quality of the harvested forage is less than dairy-quality.

The key factor in harvesting dairy-quality forage is harvest management.

Recent research conducted by Dr. Jerry Cherney at Cornell University showed that plant development varies with grass species, but forage quality decline was consistent across all species. In other words, the forage species is not as important as timely harvest in obtaining high-quality forage.

Reed canarygrass, bromegrass, tall fescue, and timothy were harvested at various stages of development and tested for quality. According to Cherney, the research showed that fiber digestion and other quality parameters decline with increased maturity.

The magnitude and rate of quality decline with maturity are much more important than quality differences between individual species. Cherney also suggested that producers should consider harvesting their pure grass stands in the spring for dairy feed before they harvest alfalfa in order to produce acceptable grass quality.

In other research presented at the recent American Society of Agronomy meetings, results indicate that spring harvest of later maturing varieties of cool-season grass species are lower in quality than early maturing varieties. When an early and late maturing variety of orchardgrass were harvested at the same stage of maturity, the early maturing variety had greater quality than the late maturing variety.

The research suggested that the lower quality was the result of higher temperatures during the growth of the late-maturing variety relative to the temperatures in which the earlier maturing variety grew.

However, the difference in quality between late and earlier maturing grasses was minor compared to the drop in quality associated with delaying the first harvest of either variety.

In summary, the use of cool-season grasses for dairy-quality feed requires harvesting the grasses earlier than normal. Delay in grass harvest and not grass species is the major factor in producing low-quality grass hay or silage.

Consider harvesting grasses before you would normally harvest alfalfa to obtain high quality forage that is suitable for dairy animals.

Check Moisture Before Baling Hay

Marvin Hall
Forage Specialist

Baling hay at the optimum moisture content can be a tricky business, which often involves some guesswork and cooperation from the weather. Baling at moisture levels above the optimum will cause heating and spoilage of the hay.

Conversely, baling at moisture levels below the optimum causes excessive leaf loss, which translates into lower quality hay. The optimum moisture for baling is not a constant and depends on the bale size being used.

Moisture for small rectangular bales should be no higher than 20 percent, unless a preservative is used. The upper moisture limit in large bales, both round and rectangular, is about 16 percent to avoid taking special precautions to prevent excessive heating during storage. If large round bales are stored outside and uncovered, moisture content at baling can be up to 20 percent.

Determining moisture content can be done with a microwave oven or Koster moisture tester before baling, or an electronic moisture meter at baling. When using an electronic moisture meter, probe from the end of rectangular bales and through the rounded diameter of round bales. At least five probes of each bale should be taken and the readings should be averaged. If readings vary more than three percentage points, more probes should be taken and the average recalculated.

Many factors can affect a meter's accuracy, such as bale density. Tightly packaged bales will give the most accurate readings.

The use of chemical preservatives is another factor that may affect the accuracy of electronic moisture meters. Some chemicals, such as propionic acid, can increase readings as much as four percentage points.

If preservatives are used and the instruction manual for the moisture meter does not provide information about effects of chemicals on meter performance, contact the manufacturer for additional information.

NASS Agriculture Counts

By Marc Tosiano
Pa. State Statistician

FORAGE STATISTICS — NEW FOR 2000 CROP YEAR

I am pleased to announce the first measure of all hay harvested in Pennsylvania, not just dry baled hay. Over the years, making haylage has become a very prominent practice in the northern dairy states. We have been remiss in not generating statistics for what is nearly one-third of all hay harvested in Pennsylvania.

Historically, only dry hay acreage and production has been collected from farmers and published in the annual "Crop Production" annual report published every January. All dry hay statistics began in 1866. In 1919, breakdowns were added for Alfalfa dry hay and Other dry hay. The 2000 crop year brings the first measure of haylage and greenchop in Pennsylvania and seven other states across the U.S.

Seven other field offices of USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) were also involved in this pilot program to measure all hay production annually. The states publishing dry hay and haylage/greenchop production are Michigan, Minnesota, New York, Pennsylvania, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia, and Wisconsin. The only large haylage/greenchop state excluded from the pilot program was California, which was the third largest state according to the 1997 Census of Agriculture.

As always, the NASS January 11, 2001 Crop Production report published dry hay production for 48 states broken down by All Hay, Alfalfa Hay, and Other Hay. The report also contained four new tables with acreage, yield, and production statistics for the eight pilot states.

The first two new tables show Haylage and Greenchop production as green weight for Alfalfa only and all hay acreage. The second pair of tables combine dry hay statistics with the new Haylage/Greenchop data to publish all hay harvested (forage) statistics on a dry equivalent basis broken down by Alfalfa acres and all acres. (For the complete report, see http://usda.mannlib.cornell.edu/reports/nassr/field/pcp-bban/.)

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA), our partner in agricultural statistics, has asked us to divide the state hay statistics into county level information. We have provided this service for many years for dry hay. The 2000 crop year would be the first time we generate county statistics for all hay harvested, including haylage/greenchop. If we can make statistically sound estimates by county, this information will be published in our 2000-2001 Annual Summary. The annual summary is also published in hard copy in the fall.

We hope it won't come, but sooner or later we will have to survive another poor growing season. Both state and county figures are very important in learning where average hay yields are unusually low. This information is available to farmers and grower organizations to be able to search for other sources of feed in a lean hay year. Government agencies also use this data when they must decide on financial assistance to hay farmers.

In 1999, our dry hay statistics were used by PDA and other agencies as a major factor in detecting low yields and administering an assistance program. Unfortunately, these new haylage statistics were not yet available to better evaluate the haylage and greenchop situation.

Cooperative extension is another major user of these new hay statistics and information about all other commodities. They need solid statistics to show how and where they need to serve Pennsylvania agriculture. Statistics are an important part of justifying extension research grants and positions in various county offices or in State College. I have met many agents recently and they often tell me how important these statistics are to their work in cooperative extension.

Now for the numbers:

In 2000, Pennsylvania ranked 16th in the nation for dry hay production with 4.4 million tons of dry hay. After adding haylage/greenchop, Pennsylvania ranked third among the eight pilot states with 6.3 million tons of hay on a dry equivalent basis.

Only Wisconsin and Minnesota produced more with 11.7 and 8.7 million. tons, respectively. Two million acres were harvested for hay in Pennsylvania in the 2000 crop year. Of that, 1.8 million acres were cut at least once for dry hay and 620,000 acres were cut for haylage/greenchop. Dry hay harvest yielded 2.46 tons per acre while haylage/greenchop yielded 6.25 green tons per acre.

Together, all hay harvested from Pennsylvania's 2 million acres yielded 3.17 tons per acre on a dry equivalent basis.

Hay and forage statistics are only made possible by the farmers who take the time to complete our surveys. Most folks do. Your cooperation helps us to generate timely, accurate, and useful statistics in service to Pennsylvania and U.S. agriculture. Thank you!

Don't 'Baby' Alfalfa During Seeding Year

Forage Specialist

Yield and persistence were once the primary concerns of producers, and cutting at full flower was a common practice. However, with the release of multidisease resistant varieties which have a broad range in dormancy levels, producers have considerable flexibility in choosing a harvest management strategy to meet their needs.

Harvest of alfalfa that is spring-seeded without a companion crop should not be delayed in an attempt to improve persistence. Young alfalfa stands (seeding year) are capable of persisting under more severe harvest management practices than older alfalfa stands.

Cutting of alfalfa 40 days after seeding does not lower stand persistence compared to cutting 80 days after seeding. Timing of the first harvest after seeding, however, does effect alfalfa yield and quality. Harvesting the newly seeded alfalfa between the bud and 10 percent bloom stage of development produces the greatest dry matter and quality yield.

Harvesting earlier produces less dry matter and harvesting later results in less nutrient yield per acre. If soil fertility is optimum, the stand appears healthy, and a highly-disease resistant variety of alfalfa was seeded, then harvesting at the bud stage should be considered as a harvest management option.

When a companion crop is spring-seeded with the alfalfa, harvesting of the companion crop dictates the timing of the initial alfalfa harvest. Alfalfa seeded during late summer or early fall is usually well established by the following spring and can be subjected to the same harvest regime as established alfalfa.

Cutting alfalfa for the first time at a stubble height greater than three- to five-inches does not improve persistence, but does lower yield. Yield reductions of approximately 35 percent are reported when alfalfa is cut at nine-inch compared to three-inch stubble height.

farm, with 270 acres in grass. The rented acreage yields corn silage and alfalfa haylage for the operation.

Hertzler started out buying two Dutch Belted cattle for his wife as a gift, which grew a year later when she purchased more animals ready to calve.

Hertzler purchased his Perry County farm in 1978 and built an 80-cow freestall barn. In 1993, the Hertzler family started looking at opportunities to become more profitable.

By then they were farming 1,000 acres, putting in 16-hour days, dealing with herd health problems, high somatic cell counts, and considering equipment replacement.

Because several people suggested grazing, the Hertzlers began to take the idea seriously. After visiting a grazing operation in December of 1993, they were convinced of the potential of farming on a grass-based operation. They began implementing their own grassland operation almost immediately and were ready to graze by April.

Since then, they have met goals such as buying less protein, feeding less grain, lowering the somatic cell count, improving herd health and reproduction, identifying heat detection more easily, decreasing cull rate, and enjoying a less stressful workday.

"We found that farming was less of a science and more of an art," said Hertzler. "For example, it's not up to the feed salesman but up to me to know when to change the fences."

Ken King, Kansas

Kenneth King, Hutchinson, Kan., is the owner and manager of "JaKo," a family corporation. The King family milks 75 head of cattle and owns 300 acres, 300 of which are in grass. Erosion problems on the Kansas plain helped to lead to the grassland operation.

King's opening audience-participatory demonstration with rubber bands illustrated that most people think along inhibited lines. "Don't make assumptions," he said. "Be creative.

"Have you ever told your kids, 'stop dreaming and get to work?'" he asked. "Have you ever spent a day helping your kids fulfill their dreams?

"I propose that when we develop our children's hands — which develop on their own anyway — instead of developing their minds — which takes creative attention to develop — then we lose out on a wonderful opportunity and resource.

"For too long in my life I've used my hands, scooping feed. It was when I spent time on the fence posts, observing my cows, that my life changed.

"I'm not downplaying or criticizing working with your hands," he said. But working with your hands comes naturally, and you have got to cultivate your mind, whether yours, or your childrens', or your employees'.

"You don't need to produce more than your neighbor to be competitive, you just have to produce more efficiently, or have a better marketing strategy."

King outlined resourceful strategies, from a polytape cattle guard which allows vehicles to drive over, to an insulated water tank made from a 30-gallon drum inside a 55-gallon drum and surrounded with styrofoam.

The calves, born in early April, nurse on their mothers until they are 3-4 months old, and then they are weaned by simply being placed in an adjoining pasture.

Spend time trying to optimize, he said, and consider your resources, such as land, cattle, or customers. Even problems can be resources, as problems can be turned into assets. "The only limiting factor to resources is our minds," he said.

PFGC SPECIAL REPORT

ALTERNATE FORAGE CROPS

Dr. Dan Undersander
Forage Agronomist
Department of Agronomy
University of Wisconsin

Farmers have two reasons for asking about alternate crops. The first is for use as an emergency forage when stands or new seedings of perennial forages fail and the second is as a long-term alternative to alfalfa.

Before beginning this paper, we should put things into perspective by stating that alfalfa is still the best choice, in most cases, for long-term production of high-quality, high-tonnage harvested forage. We also expect to see increased use of corn silage, where topography and farm plans permit in dairy rations, in the alfalfa-based rations.

While grasses can produce high quality forage well in grazing systems, they tend to be high in fiber when allowed to grow to higher yields for harvest as hay or haylage. The high fiber will restrict animal intake in dairy rations. Other legumes, while providing good forage quality, tend to be lower yielding than alfalfa.

Small grains should be harvested at boot stage (head beginning to emerge from leaf whirl) for milking dairy cattle and at early heading for other categories of animals. The same is true for small grains seeded with peas. Small grains are definitely cool season crops and have greatly reduced yields when planted later in the spring or over summer. Fall plantings tend to produce little forage in the seeding year. We would not recommend late summer seeding alfalfa under the small grains. The cover crop will slow down development of alfalfa and increase risk of winterkill.

Seeding a mixture of spring oats and winter wheat in the fall will allow for forage harvest in October (primarily oats) and again in the spring (winter wheat).

Small grain-field pea mixtures have gained popularity as an emergency crop. Primary benefit of peas mixed with small grains is to improve quality. Yield effects are variable, ranging from 0 to 0.5 tons per acre increases. Peas may be mixed with oats, triticale, or barley. Barley tends to be ready to harvest earlier than the other two species.

There does not appear to be a best species — the top yielding varieties of each species perform better than the poorer-yielding varieties of all other small grain species. Small grain-pea mixtures have wider harvest window. Increased forage quality has been observed with higher pea seeding rates up to 100 pounds per acre. However, diminishing returns and cost of peas suggest that the optimum seeding rate is 50 pound peas per acre.

Corn should be harvested for silage at beginning at half milk line. Forage sorghum should be harvested for silage at milk stage.

Forage sorghum, sudangrasses, and sorghum/sudangrass hybrids are better adapted than most species to drought, high temperature, water logging, and low soil pH than corn, but will yield less in seasons with cool August and September. Sudangrass and sorghum/sudangrass hybrids should be harvested at two- to three-feet of height (two to three cuttings for season). Harvesting at later maturity may increase yield but will result in very low forage quality.

Soybeans should be harvested at R7 stage (when first pods are beginning to turn color). The idea is to harvest just before beans have begun to form. Soybeans do not ensile well because of high oil content and should be mixed with a grass (corn, sorghum, sudangrass) at chopping to improve ensiling characteristics.

Hay Provides For Needs Of The World

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The International Market Development Committee of the National Hay Association has a purpose and goal to educate foreign buyers, importers, processors and users of hay and specialized grain products with information and education on product availability, qualities, and nutrient values that will help improve their livestock feeding and production programs.

Today's producers use the latest technology and research data to maintain the highest nutritional values.

In recent years, export markets have increased demand for quality roughage, as well as, in the U.S.

The most common hays produced for export are timothy, alfalfa, sudangrass, and Bermuda grass hay.

These hays are marketed in a variety of ways as feeding material for dairy cows, horses, beef cattle, swine, chickens, and sheep.

ARS Scientists Develop Phosphorus Index To Control Pasture Runoff

WASHINGTON, D.C. — USDA Agricultural Research Service (ARS) scientists have developed a Phosphorus Index (PI) to help curb runoff when farmers fertilize pastures or croplands with animal manure.

The research is already improving the way farmers fertilize their fields in Arkansas and may lead to more advanced techniques across the nation. Arkansas, a leading poultry-producing state, began using the index statewide in February.

Previous studies show that poultry litter applications to pastures often result in excessive runoff into nearby water bodies, according to Philip A. Moore, Jr., a soil scientist with the ARS Poultry Production and Products Safety Research Unit, Fayetteville, Ark. Eutrophication occurs when nutrients from animal manure — especially phosphorus — are carried by water runoff to waterways, forming blue-green algae and undesirable aquatic plants that rob water of oxygen.

One resulting problem is rising municipal water rates because of the cost of eliminating taste and odor problems caused by algae. The lack of oxygen in some bodies of water has even led to the death of fish and other aquatic life, according to Moore.

Phosphorus is a crucial nutrient in the nation's pastures, but its impact on the environment doesn't always stop there. Researchers recognize a connection between increased soluble levels of phosphorus in water and higher levels in a watershed's soil.

The index can be used to predict the risk of phosphorus runoff from pastures fertilized with animal manure or commercial fertilizers, according to Moore. Poultry litter — a mixture of chicken manure, feathers, spilled food, and bedding material — is an inexpensive and popular fertilizer for cropland because the manure contains nitrogen and phosphorus, two important fertilizer ingredients.

Several states use a soil test to determine the threshold levels at which animal manures may no longer be applied. However, the index developed by Moore, Paul B. DeLaune, a doctoral candidate in the Department of Crop, Soil and Environmental Sciences at the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville, and other researchers now provides farmers with a risk-assessment tool to prevent over-fertilization and actually predict phosphorus runoff.

ARS is the chief scientific research agency of the USDA.

SPECIAL REPORT

USING THE NUTRITIONAL BALANCE ANALYZER (NUTBAL) PROGRAM TO TRACK CRUDE PROTEIN VALUES FOR RANGELAND AND CRP UNDER DROUGHT CONDITIONS

Mary Schrader
Natural Resources Conservation Service

Since 1997, the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) in Nebraska has participated in the Forage Quality and Animal Well Being Project. Through this project NRCS personnel are able to collect fecal samples for analysis and provide a nutritional balance profile to landowners for a variety of landscapes and cattle herd situations.

Because of the dry conditions last spring (2000), I saw an opportunity to collect samples on land enrolled in the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP).

According to the National Weather Service in Goodland, Kansas, Dundy County receives an average of 14.75 inches of rainfall from January to August in a normal year. During the summer of 2000, Dundy County received 9.34 inches for the same time period. This lack of precipitation was accompanied by several days of 100-degree temperatures and 20-mph south winds during June and July.

The most noticeable lack of rainfall came in May and June. In May, the normal rainfall is 3.03 inches and in June, 2.92 inches. This year, we received 0.12 inches rainfall in May and 1.92 inches in June. This lack of rainfall accompanied by high temperatures and strong winds at the start of the growing season slowed the germination and the growth of grass in the warm-season pastures.

Our normal grazing season runs from May 10 to October 15. There are basically two types of plant communities in Dundy County: mixed grass prairie and sand sage prairie. The majority of this county in which I work is in the sand sage prairie plant community.

Fecal samples were collected on native rangeland from May through August. The crude protein values ran from a high of 12.01 percent in May and gradually decreased to a low of 6.46 percent in August. There was a steady decrease in crude protein, as expected, because of normal grass growth patterns.

On June 9, 2000, Dundy County was released for Emergency Grazing on land enrolled in the CRP program. Fecal samples were collected from CRP land starting in June and continuing through September. In June, the crude protein was 10.67 percent. The last sample collected in September had a crude protein of 9.57 percent. Overall, the crude protein levels for the CRP land did not vary much throughout the summer.

Once the analysis is returned to the field office from the lab, the information is entered into the Nutritional Balance Analyzer program. This program requires data from the herd such as type of animal, breed, weight, age, body condition score, and if bred or lactating. Also entered are environmental data such as temperature, wind speed, slope of area grazed, and if adequate water is available. If supplements are fed, a lab analysis of the feed is required. After the data have been entered, an animal profile is generated. One significant figure is the digestible organic matter to crude protein ratio (DOM/CP). The recommended range is 4-7.

This ratio will determine if the available forage is meeting the needs of the animal.

During the past two years, this ratio has risen above 7.5 by mid-August on native rangeland. This is a warning sign to the producer that a protein supplement may be needed to maintain body condition score. This past summer, a ratio above 7.5 was seen at the end of July. A recommendation for a protein supplement was passed on to the landowner. A sample collected one month later showed the consumable crude protein had increased to 7.9 percent, which lowered the DOM/CP ratio from 7.8 to 7.2, assuming the cattle consume 1 pound per head per day. The landowner provided a 22 percent protein tub for the cattle to use free choice.

On CRP land, the crude protein levels from two samples in August were 10.66 percent and 10.95 percent. A landowner running cow/calf pairs was concerned that the forage would not allow the cow to maintain a calf. The DOM/CP ratio for his herd was 5.9. According to the information I was given, the forage he was grazing was adequate for the cow to maintain a calf. This particular CRP field had never been grazed or hayed, and had set idle since 1989.

Many times when discussing the option of renting CRP to graze, the landowner indicated it is too expensive. Let's take a look at the cost based on number of cow-calf pairs per month. In this area, native rangeland rents for approximately $18 per cow-calf pair per month. For 160 acres, averaging 0.5 AUMs per acre, the stocking rate would be 62 cow-calf pairs. The average rent for CRP in this area is $7.50 per acre per month (based on an average CRP rental rate of $30 per acre per month). The stocking rate would be 92 cow-calf pairs, assuming 1.0 AUM per acre (75 percent of normal stocking rate according to CRP regulations). The cost per cow-calf pair would be $13.04 per month. On CRP, you can run an additional 30 head and the cost per pair per month is less than the cost per pair for native rangeland ($13.04 compared to $18). Other costs to consider when grazing CRP are boundary fence and labor to install the fence, the cost and time to haul water each day, or the cost for electricity to provide water.

An additional cost on native rangeland during dry weather is the protein supplement. When calculated on a per-day basis, the protein cost is approximately $0.26 per head per day, assuming the cattle utilize 1 pound per day.

In summary, I would like to restate three things that caught my attention. First, the crude protein values for the CRP land stayed fairly steady throughout the summer, whereas the values for native rangeland drop off as the plants go through their growth cycle, especially during dry weather. Second, the DOM/CP ratio for CRP stayed within the allowable range, indicating the animal was receiving adequate protein from the forage. Third, on native rangeland, the

DOM/CP ratio showed a need for a protein supplement almost three weeks earlier, because of the dry weather, than in past years.

I was encouraged by the data I received this past summer. Many times I hear landowners say "my cows won't eat those grasses" or "these grasses won't maintain a cow-calf herd" (when referring to seeded grasses). Although I have only one growing season of data, I believe this information will be very useful when discussing the use and value of seeded grass with producers.

Lab Plays Key Role In U.S. Research

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Parasitic wasps, flies, fungi, and bacteria abound at the Agricultural Research Service's (ARS's) European Biological Control Laboratory (EBCL) in Montpellier, France.

There, ARS and collaborating scientists are subjecting these organisms to a battery of tests aimed at pitting them against non-native insects and weeds that endanger U.S. agriculture.

Montpellier, on France's Mediterranean coast, is a strategic locale. From this seaside city, EBCL scientists can hop flights to the pests' points of origin in North Africa, the Middle East, Balkans and Asia, where natural enemies can be found. Typically, they'll explore sites where the crops, climate or habitat matches a particular U.S. region where a pest has become established and a biocontrol agent is needed.

Entomologists Kim Hoelmer and Dominique Coutinot, for example, are now rearing Hymenopterous wasps, collected last fall from Tunisia, that parasitize olive fruit flies. In California, the fly's establishment threatens the state's $33.9 million olive industry.

Charles Pickett, a California Department of Food and Agriculture cooperator, is seeking fruit fly parasites that could be released into olive groves as part of an integrated approach to controlling the pest.

Tim Widmer, meanwhile, is testing the host specificity, virulence and other features of dozens of fungi and bacteria cultured from salt cedar, yellow starthistle, giant reed and other Eurasian weeds. While collecting diseased reed specimens in Nepal's wetland areas in September, the plant pathologist picked up — and had to pick off — another inhabitant: leeches.

Some other pests on the EBCL "hit-list" include diamondback moths, gypsy moths, pink hibiscus mealybug, Asian long-horned beetles, wheat stem sawflies, apple leafrollers, knapweed, hoary cress, and rush skeleton weed.

BARENBRUG

BG-34 Perennial RYE GRASS

A winterhardy blend of the best late maturing diploid varieties of perennial ryegrass from Europe. The combination of winter hardiness and late maturity has made this blend very popular. Used pure or in a mix with White clover, it provides extremely high quality forage. People who graze BG-34 report increases of milk production up to 10 pounds of milk per cow per day.

- BARALFA 54 Proven track record
- BARALFA 42 IQ and BARALFA 32 IQ Extremely high feed quality

NEW BARAULA ORCHARDGRASS

Late maturing and winterhardy! Developed in The Netherlands and is listed in many European countries (including Germany and Switzerland). It is one of the latest maturing varieties available today. Not only is Baraula very winterhardy, it is also highly digestible even after the first cutting. It has proven to withstand severe winters and is also capable of enduring dry and hot summers.

CLOVERS

Alice White is a new variety in the US and is a truly improved variety. It has large leaves and grows to medium height. Alice has shown tremendous nitrogen fixing benefits for the grass that grows with it. Alice is persistent and winterhardy making it the perfect companion for pastures.

Barbian White is a small leaved and very persistent White clover. This makes it a perfect variety for sheep, goat and horses. It also is the clover of choice if high traffic is anticipated.
